EVERY BALLOON ASCENDS with a prayer at the conclusion of the Church of the Wayfarer's gala luncheon last Sunday. A prayer was attached to each of the helium-filled balloons which were set sail to symbolize the Wayfarer's spreading of the Gospel throughout the community. The festive event celebrated the Church of the Wayfarer's 75th birthday. To commemorate the Diamond Jubilee, which was conceived by the present minister, Dr. Paul Woudenberg, a special calendar of events began on Sunday, Jan. 7, 1979 and culminated Sunday, Nov. 4. Throughout the year, Sunday services have been marked by special events, guest speakers and films, as well as services honoring people who have assisted the church over the past years. Other photograph of the celebration Sunday can be found on page 4.

A rebuttal

Dear Editor:

The feature story of last Thursday's issue calls for a response. I have known Milton Mayer since his early Carmel days and have participated in his Great Books discussions.

Several statements in the article need clarification. The value of real estate in Carmel precludes the purchasing by low-income families, whether Caucasian, Oriental or Negroid.

A property owner desirous of selling his home expects to get full value for his property and one can hardly expect him to sell for loss to a buyer unable to meet that price, no matter what his race.

Contending that black children would be unwelcome in Carmel schools has been disproved by fact. As long ago as the late 40s my children attended Carmel High School and two of their very popular and active classmates were a black brother and sister.

Several years ago my next door neighbor was a well-educated and active black woman with a young daughter who attended Woods School.

A former Pine Cone staff member had a black wife and two children in Carmel schools.

During my school days in Berkeley I attended schools with members of every race who received all the scholastic advantages available to me. Logically, all of my classmates have not prospered nor furthered their educational possibilities.

The same situation applies today and to put this onus on Carmel property owners, churches and schools is patently unfair.

Congratulations

Dear Editor:

Congratulations for publishing Milton Mayer's article Cold Pogrom in Carmel. You both have a great deal of spunk.

What a brainstorm!

Dear Editor:

What a brainstorm! What meandering confusion out of a clear Carmel sky! The lengthy public confession suddenly appearing on page 1 and 9, issue of Oct. 18, was shockingly headed "Cold Pogrom in Carmel!" I ask, "How relative and constructive was it?"

Why does it hit out in every direction? What compulsion authored it so? To demean, under the fanaticism of a cause, various segments of Americans? Oh, how prejudiced and downright silly can one become to adopt a "holier than thou" stance in championship of fair play towards a minority!

Wiser minds and clearer thinkers know that the world has always been far from perfect. They do their part towads improving it. They seek to advance the human family towards fairness, economic security, nobility, worthy education, cooperation and peace.

They realize that though man has been around millions of years, he is still far from attaining nobility in thought and action. Yet in a nuclear era, time is so fleeting; our efforts must be redoubled to do what can be done to make man of every race, nationality, faith and culture a happier and more praiseworthy part of earthly life.

Why blow one's top? What is accomplished by suddenly bursting out with Cold Pogrom In Carmel? Will it not appear to the many good folks who live in Carmel, who are active in many humanitarian causes, as an affront? As startling as if one suddenly beheld a bull in a china closet?

Of late years, our nation and surely the Monterey Peninsula has adopted a fairer and considerate attitude towards fair-play for all Americans, however they are classified as a segment of the human family. Do we need the stirring up of irrational animosities in the name of eliminating prejudice, towards a particular group?

Is there a spot on earth—a village, town, city, county, state, nation and continent at which one, inclined to be unreasonably critical, cannot point a finger of scorn—however unjustified? To say, "Hey you, why are there not more people in your area of this, that, or some other race, nationality, faith, sex, economic level, or whatever living in your area?" Is there a cold pogrom going on, or what?

Let us not be unreasonable! Let us try and control our fevered, high-blood-pressure-urge to "come out fighting." Let us recall the wise adage: A fool leaps in where angels fear to tread. Why try, out of a clear sky, to stir up a hornet's nest? What is accomplished thereby, but dismay, anger, hurt?

However skillfully written, the article indicates immaturity. As if composed by a teenager, gifted with words but of little experience as to the soundness of what is authored on the spur of the moment inspiration.

Carmel-by-the-Sea is a charming and kindly Peninsula community. It is not an area of pogrom!

Talented youngsters

Dear Editor:

As just one member of a packed, enthusiastic audience on Nov. 3 in the Pacific Grove Junior High auditorium, I should like to express warmest thanks to our musical neighbors who brought the Suzuki Talent Education Tour to the Monterey Peninsula.

This amazing group of children, ages six to 14, comprises but a chosen 10 in all of over a thousand young people trained with a love of the piano or violin or viola by Shinichi Suzuki in Japan. In six weeks, this fall, the gifted, versatile and almost indefatigable young people have a schedule of 17 concerts in a total of eight states and Puerto Rico and Mexico.

The striking beauty of their various performances in the classics—and in some of their folk songs and our own—was crowned with a moving finale known to all as America the Beautiful. It can be no exaggeration to say that many hearts were touched by this tribute, especially from Japan to the U.S.A.

To the Monterey Community School of Music and its benefactors, sponsors and patrons, and above all to Miss Angie Machado, pianist and teacher in Carmel, we owe a debt of profound thanks. The countless hours of preparation alone, for transportation and housing, speak volumes for the devotion our local musical leaders share, and for their unflagging efforts to acquaint American children with music that is music.

Liked format

Dear Editor:

Following close upon a time when there has been an unusual amount of criticism of your editorial policy, it is a pleasure to be able to make a positive comment:

You are to be congratulated on the innovative format of your special pre-election section of Nov. 1.

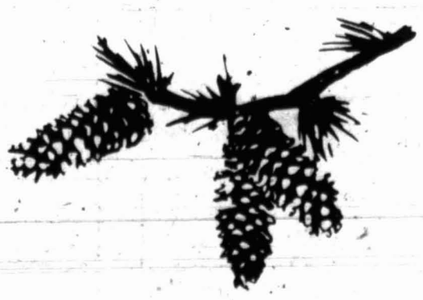

The chart-like layout provided convenient and instant comparison of candidate viewpoints; your questions were rational and to the point.

Good job!

Clarification

The Pine Cone incorrectly reported Nov. 1 that school officials had released the names of the two Carmel High School students charged with chopping down a campus oak tree. According to high school principal Dan Stevenson, the Monterey County Sheriff's Department released the names of the two students.

Vote of 'no confidence'

By AL EISNER

IT SHOULD BE apparent that the rejection Tuesday of annexation by voters in Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields and the overwhelming approval of the measure creating a strong city administrator for the city of Carmel are closely related.

Both actions represent a vote of "no-confidence" in the Norberg administration.

There were many logical reasons why the folks in the areas adjacent to Carmel should have wanted to annex to the city. Some of these reasons were outlined in this space last week.

I think the bottom line for many of the people who voted "no" was their fear of being governed by Gunnar Norberg and his majority on the present City Council. In the solitude of the polling booth, they must have switched their vote after recalling the irresponsible antics of the present council.

Even though the new voters could have had a voice in changing the composition of the council next spring, the thought of cringing before Norberg was undoubtedly too much to bear.

The size of the vote in favor of the law delegating strong powers to the city administrator was a surprise, especially since the initiative had no precedence, apparently, in California. It is astounding that more than 1,100 voters in Carmel cast a ballot in favor of the law, especially since the voters in past years rejected the concept of a city manager.

It is a tribute to the good sense of the citizens of Carmel that they voted to tell the present council—in no uncertain terms—to quit meddling with the day-to-day operation of city government.

THE ISSUE AROSE, you will recall, when the council last year tried to strip City Administrator Jack Collins of the powers they granted by law only a year earlier. It turned out to be a personality conflict (some say a vendetta) that resulted in the loss of a fine municipal executive.

Collins had won the confidence of the municipal department heads, and restored a level of sanity to negotiations between the city and its employees. He was also responsible for radically altering the format of the city budget so that it became, for the first time, a readable document that was accessible to ordinary people.

Fortunately, this new city administrator law has teeth. It can only be changed by a vote of the people.

The present City Council has shown disdain for the wishes of the people during the past two years. The most notable recent example of this was the action by the council to pay itself a salary, despite an overwhelming "no" vote several years ago when the issue appeared on the ballot.

The fact that only 280 voters voted against the city administrator law should be a clear signal that Carmel is fed up with the arrogance and the incompetence of the present council. It could be that the 280 voters represent what is left of the "mandate" given to Norberg by the voters almost four years ago to "save" Carmel.

THERE HAS BEEN a lot of talk about possible candidates for the election next spring. Perhaps some qualified candidates will agree to run for the council now that the dimensions of the job have been defined. The city administrator will be empowered to handle many of the tiresome tasks that the indefatigable Norberg assumed as part of his job.

The kind of people that would best represent the people of Carmel are frequently busy. They cannot possibly devote full time to the job of running the city government.

Remember the old adage, "If you want to get something done, give it to a busy man (person)." With the exception of Councilman Howard Brunn, an active businessman, the other four members of the council are either retired or under-employed. This gives them plenty of time to tinker with the gears of city government. Successful executives understand the need to delegate authority. The voters of Carmel, thank goodness, understand it also.

AS MANY OF YOU know, I joined a group that journeyed to Europe for three weeks. The itinerary included visits to four cities in three countries behind the Iron Curtain. The trip was most interesting. I'll be writing a series of articles in the coming weeks with my observations.

I would like to say, though, that conditions in the Socialist countries in the Soviet bloc are appalling. Many of the people in these countries yearn to get out from the yoke of Soviet imperialism. It becomes apparent that the lack of individual initiative under the socialist system is a serious handicap.

It's good to be back home. And it's good to live in a nation that values the freedom of the individual. Seeing the "other way" is a sober reminder of the value of the American Experiment. With its many problems and flaws, there is no better system of government anywhere.

City measures B, C approved, A rejected

Strong voter turnout for election

VOTERS OF CARMEL overwhelmingly reaffirmed broad powers for their city administrator while residents of Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods narrowly defeated annexation to the city in Tuesday's election marked by a strong voter turnout.

With 56 percent of the registered voters casting ballots in the unincorporated precincts, the annexation measure lost by a vote of 555 to 453, according to the unofficial tally of the county registrar's office.

Measure B to retain the powers of the city administrator post was passed by Carmel voters 1,156 to 280. The measure stemmed from a bitter dispute earlier this year when then-City Administrator Jack Collins resigned in the face of efforts by the City Council to trim his powers.

The heavy vote (80 percent) in favor of preserving the strong city administrator ordinance made it apparent that the loss of the popular administrator was an important factor.

In the other city measure, residents voted 801 to 624 to recommend that the city purchase the former site of the Piccadilly Nursery on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. The advisory vote to the City Council passed by a margin of 56.2 percent to 43.7 percent.

The election upset was in the race for the board of education of the Carmel Unified School District. Three-term incumbent Richard Wilsdon placed last against a field of three challengers. When the new board is seated in December, it will have four new members with only one remaining incumbent.

ELECTED TO THE board for four-year terms were Monterey attorney Ron Parravano, veteran board observer Barbara Sanford and Monterey High School athletics director Ken White. Sanford and White were the top vote-getters, both with 4,699. Parravano received 3,828 and Wilsdon 2,922 votes.

For the two-year seat, Monterey High School counselor Doyle Clayton scored a resounding victory over retired Marine officer George Kew, receiving 79.2 percent of the vote.

Voters selected Clayton over Kew, 4,498 to 1,179 in a school board race that drew an overall larger-than-usual 43 percent turnout.

The three incumbents in the race for the Carmel Sanitary District board retained their seats for another four-year term, although the lone challenger, Frank Bray, narrowly missed unseating his incumbent running-mate.

The first and only woman board member, Charlotte Hurst, received the most votes, 2,392, while current board president Ken McGinnis tallied 2,387.

'There was no question that the vote had a lot to do with Jack's (Collins) being eased out of Carmel'—Council member Helen Arnold.

Completing the run-off, two-term incumbent Ted Weller just nudged out Bray, 1,985 to 1,665.

IT WAS NOT APPARENT until the closing days of the campaign that Bray had teamed with Weller. They were paired together in advertisements that appeared in local newspapers the final week before the election.

One board member who asked not to be named speculated that Weller hoped Bray would unseat either McGinnis or Hurst, shifting the majority on the board in his favor. But if Bray, a retired court reporter, had tallied about 400 more votes Tuesday, he would have dumped Weller. Weller was unavailable for comment.

McGinnis said that Weller's low vote was the result of the controversy over his failure to maintain an active residence within the district.

McGinnis, a top vote-getter along with Hurst, said, "Charlotte and I consider this a mandate that we're heading in the right direction with our support for the ASBS."

'People didn't want to get involved with the present City Council'—Francis Lloyd, pro-annexation committee chairman.

The ASBS (Area of Special Biological Significance) designation was given Carmel Bay in 1975, and has resulted in major restrictions on sewer connections and annexations to the district. The ASBS was passed to prevent potential damage to the marine life in the Bay. McGinnis, Hurst and board member Vernon Head have steadfastly supported the ASBS despite the restrictions it has on growth.

"I FEEL PARTICULARLY gratified," said Carmel council member Helen Arnold about the resounding support for the city administrator ordinance.

"There was no question that the vote had a lot to do with Jack's (Collins) being eased out of Carmel. It was a terrible thing that we lost him. The vote was clear cut. I think it's a complete vindication," Arnold said.

Royal Adams, chairman of the Common Sense Committee that circulated the initiative to place the ordinance before the people, said the vote "proves the people of Carmel have a whole lot of common sense." She credited the victory to a "tremendous team of volunteers" who worked to make the community "well-informed" on the issue.

The move last February to trim the city administrator's powers was spearheaded by Councilman Mike Brown, joined by Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilman Les Gross. Neither Brown nor Norberg could be reached for comment Wednesday morning.

Arnold said that she was happy that the residents voted for the city to purchase the Piccadilly site. "It should be open space. There's a lot of pressure to build shops there. The less time that we lose acquiring it the better off we are," she said.

THE BITTER COUNCIL dispute over Collins' post was seen as a significant factor in the annexation defeat. Carmel attorney Francis Lloyd, who headed the pro-annexation committee, said, "People didn't want to get involved with the present City Council."

Arnold agreed. "Those people don't want to be governed the way this city is run," she said.

Lloyd also blamed the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for prejudicing the annexation debate. He said that there was a "tremendous negative reaction" from the beginning when the annexation measure was ordered by the supervisors.

"It was thrust upon people and started out on a negative foot," Lloyd said. He added, however, that "we were gaining ground in the end; a lot of people changed their minds just before the election."

He said that the opponents won because "Colonel Tyner managed to keep his troops in formation just long enough."

COLONEL "STEP" Tyner said, "To say I am delighted is an understatement. We won because the people of Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods are satisfied with their police and fire services."

Tyner said that Lloyd's forces placed too much emphasis on the fact that he (Tyner) did not live inside the area proposed for annexation, although he resides inside the county fire district that would have been affected.

"They also overplayed the user fee bit. They exaggerated the amount of the fee," he said.

"I am relieved," Wilsdon said of his failure to win a fourth term on the schoo. board. "I wasn't seriously running, but I had a sense of obligation.

"It normally takes about two years for a new board member to learn the ropes. The new board will have only about five months until the preliminary budget time next spring," he said.

The Village:

Council prepares to legalize existing second kitchens

THE CARMEL CITY Council has opened the door to legalize existing second kitchens, but it may take awhile before a law is enacted.

Council members voted unanimously Monday night to restore to the proposed Carmel Local Coastal Program (LCP) the policy which advocates that second kitchens be allowed as an answer to providing moderate and low-income housing.

The Carmel Planning Commission had recommended that the policy be deleted from the LCP.

Councilman Howard Brunn led the campaign to restore the policy during the study by the council of the proposed LCP, declaring that legalizing second kitchens was "long overdue."

He was partially successful.

Brunn proposed that the entire section be restored. Council member Helen Arnold seconded his motion. But Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilman Mike Brown opposed accepting the full policy because it established specific guidelines and procedures for securing a second kitchen use permit.

Brown declared: "The policy states that all units must obtain a use permit, must be inspected to ensure compliance with local codes, etc. Let's hold it. Let's let the planning commission take a look at this and see if we want to do it this way. Let's not tie down the planning commission and future city councils."

Brown explained that the planning commission had removed the policy because "it wanted to look at it a little closer; they see the second kitchen as a separate issue."

NORBERG EXPLAINED that the LCP, which, when adopted will become part of the city General Plan, "needs a statement of some kind about a low-income program." He said that if it does not contain such a statement, the "state will clamp down on us" and tell Carmel how to establish a low-income housing program. Norberg said that he would rather see the city establish its own program.

Brown warned his fellow council members that "if we put in all of this at this time, it'll be something that will haunt us. What we have here will hamstring us. Why must we start all at once and throw the baby in the water to find out if it's too warm—or too cold?"

City Attorney George Brehmer advised the council to "adopt a more generalized statement and let the planning commission work out the details." He said that the general statement would be recognized by the state that Carmel is working to solve its low-income housing needs.

Norberg suggested successfully that this could be accomplished by adopting the LCP policy that states that "Carmel's existing stock of second units within the R-1 district be preserved and regulated as a means of providing low- to moderate-income housing." He said that the rest of the policy establishing the procedures could be deleted.

"That's agreeable," replied Brunn.

The council then voted 5-0 to accept the general policy on second kitchens and to refer the procedures for implementation to the planning commission.

BRUNN PRAISED THE coastal commission for forcing Carmel to take action to meet the needs for low- and moderate-income housing here.

"I see this as an opportunity to do something that has been long overdue. I'm grateful to the coastal commission for forcing our hand on something long overdue ... One way or another we have to legalize second kitchens," Brunn declared.

Arnold said that she favored restoring the second kitchen policy in the LCP because it will allow Carmel to establish the procedures "in the way we want them, rather than have the state tell us." She warned the council that the state has mandated that a low-income housing policy be included in the LCP. If it isn't, then the state will include it with the guidelines Carmel must follow.

(Carmel's zoning laws permit only one food preparation facility in a house on a single lot in a residential (R-1) district. As many as 200-300 illegal second kitchens in guest houses or converted garages currently exist in Carmel to provide a second "apartment" on the site. These food preparation centers are illegal, but enforcement has been lax.)

ROBERT STEPHENSON, chairman of the planning commission, told the council that the commission had voted 4-2 to delete the second kitchen policy from the LCP because the planners believed the issue should be studied in depth since the decision would be "a serious and important one.

"It's not a dead issue with us," Stephenson said. "We haven't said we don't want second kitchens."

Norberg noted that the second kitchen issue "has been before the council since 1958."

"This planning commission hasn't worked on it for 20 years," replied Stephenson.

Brunn charged that the commission recommended deletion of the LCP policy to allow second kitchens because "the planning commission found it such a hot potato and decided to pass it on to us."

"No, that's not true," retorted Stephenson. "We feel it would be to our advantage not to have it in the LCP until we come up with a definitive program."

DURING THE PUBLIC hearings on the proposed LCP, the council only heard from six persons, three speaking on the need for legalizing second kitchens.

Barney Laiolo, a former councilman and mayor, told the city that "there is a need for serious consideration for second kitchens. It is a very, very important matter to the good of the city. Legalized second kitchens is the answer to the question of low-cost housing in this town."

At the first hearing on Oct. 22, Jean Grace declared that the city is currently tolerating second kitchens, although the city ordinance prohibits them. She added that if the matter of low-income housing is to be addressed in the LCP, then the second kitchen units must be made legal.

Royal Adams warned the council that Carmel has been told by state agencies that it must provide low-income housing. "If

'Problems not caused by new post office'

Postmaster takes action to improve service

HAS THE SERVICE at the city's original post office in the village deteriorated because of the opening of a second station in the Carmel Rancho area at the entrance to Carmel Valley?

Postmaster Frank Ledesma admits that he has received complaints recently, but in his opinion they are not related to the opening of the so-called "Carmel" station.

He concludes instead that some of the workers in the city station ("Carmel-by-the-Sea") work too slowly. Statistics support this point of view, Ledesma said. "Two clerks at the Rancho sell more postage, by actual count, than five clerks at the city station do."

To check out the situation, Ledesma recently spent four days in the original station, observing traffic at various times of the day. He noted that at one time the person first in line waited nine minutes. However, the average wait was less than three, which Ledesma considers fully acceptable.

To "shore up" the local service, Ledesma has added one person who had been in training. With this addition, it will no longer be necessary to close the express window if one worker calls in sick, as happened recently. Also, he scheduled a meeting with all the workers in the city station this week to discuss the problems he sees.

LEDESMA DENIED charges that there have been fewer people working in the original post office since the second one opened. He said, however, that some of the workers are new. Although all have prior postal experience, they are slower now than they will be when they get used to this particular station.

As for the closing of the special package pick-up window in the Carmel-by-the-Sea station, Ledesma said this resulted from the fact that many rural routes are now covered at Rancho. "We do expect to open that window again after Thanksgiving," he said. "We'll keep it open through the holidays, probably from 11 to 2."

Asked if there has been less traffic in the original station since the second one opened, Ledesma said that this had not proved to be the case. "The Rancho station is getting most of its traffic from people who used to go to Monterey or Pacific Grove."

Council endorses policy to legalize existing second kitchens

face up to your responsibilities," she told the council members, "then the (state) government will do it for you.

"Carmel has the proper solution with its second kitchens," Adams said. She said that the cost of construction would prohibit low-income housing developments in Carmel.

"But here we have a solution within our grasp. Make legal the existing 200 to 300 second kitchen units. Make them licensed, and put the control of renting them into the hands of a non-profit organization such as the Carmel Foundation.

"In that way, the prerequisites of the Carmel Foundation can act as the 'controls' that are wanted; i.e., that the rental units will be rented to Carmel residents in need; those that lived here for many years and can no longer afford either the average apartment, or their own home.

"When licensed, the second kitchen units can be inspected, and brought up to a safe standard."

FOLLOWING THE hearing and action on the second kitchen policy Monday night, the council voted to schedule a special meeting to discuss the LCP. A date for the meeting will be decided by the mayor.

In addition to housing, the LCP also includes planning policies on traffic, land use and conservation, and open space.

The LCP is a combination of changes that Carmel must make in its laws to comply with the 1976 Coastal Act and of opinions expressed at public hearings conducted here last summer, according to Greg Cory, the San Francisco consultant hired by Carmel to draft the $15,000 document.

The 1972 Coastal Initiative (Proposition 20) and the 1976 Coastal Act grant Carmel "categorical exclusion" from the authority of the Regional Coastal Commission. Carmel, however, wasn't exempted from preparing a Local Coastal Program to comply with the 1976 Coastal Act.

The regional and state coastal commissions will certify the Carmel LCP once it is approved by the council.

Carmel Scouts participate in canoe trip

Eight Scouts from Carmel Boy Scout Troop 3 traveled to Healdsburg Nov. 2-4 to participate in the second annual canoe trip down the Russian River.

The Scouts started in canoes near the town of Asti and traveled down the river to the Alexander Valley Campground, a distance of approximately 20 miles.

They were the last group to make the trip this season.

Scouts participating were Van Crego, Addison Phillips, Clifton Bonner, Winston Aucutt, Siegfried Lackner, Conrad Lindgren, Jeff Fenton and John Baker.

Free Om Circle lecture Sunday at Sunset Center

Out United Focus Can Bring Peace to the World will be the lecture topic of Claudia Haskel, a member of the Om Circle, a non-sectarian organization which studies the power of the universal mantra, on Sunday, Nov. 11 in the Bingham Room of Sunset Center, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to attend the free program at 7:30 p.m.

Haskel will discuss the history of the Om Circle and the value of its use in today's world. The event is scheduled to begin concurrently with other Om meetings across the United States. 'The Windsor Story'

A German plot to kidnap the duke

(Editor's Note: Having given up the throne for Wallis Simpson, the duke of Windsor was denied a responsible role in Britain's World War II efforts. In disgust, he left his minor post with a British military mission attached to French troops—he was forbidden to visit his own countrymen—and went to his Riviera home with his duchess. Eventually they traveled to Spain and Portugal where, as the fourth of six excerpts from "The Windsor Story," by Charles J.V. Murphy and J. Bryan III, relates, a German plot to kidnap him unfolded.)

By CHARLES J.V. MURPHY and J. BRYAN III

THE SECOND WORLD war was finished for the duke of Windsor as of May 28, 1940, the day be abandoned his post in Paris and fled to Biarritz. There he scooped up his duchess and dashed across southern France to La Croe, and his superseding anxiety was for her safety; hers was for the safety of their silver, linen and other chattels. Surrounded by them, and in their own villa, they had hoped to ride out the storm; but Italy's entrance into the war on June 10 and the German occupation of Paris, which had been declared an open city, on June 12-14, together with the desperate plight of the British army at Dunkirk, put their situation in an alarming new light.

A British neighbor warned the Windsors that the Germans were already at Lyons, only 200 miles away.

The duchess said, "If they overflowed the Riviera and caught us, people would say that we had deliberately given ourselves up. That was an important factor in our decision to head for Spain."

HITLER'S WEHRMACHT stood on the Pyrenees, and Madrid fairly crawled with German agents. Winston Churchill, according to Lord Beaverbrook, on taking over at No. 10 Downing St., was immediately dominated by two purposes: to save a port in the south of France for carrying the war back to Europe after Britain had been re-armed, and to whisk the Windsors off the continent and out of Hitler's grasping hands. The impressionable and volatile Windsor was too tempting a prize to leave unattended in the cockpit of Madrid.

To leave the Windsors in the midst of a company of plotters and schemers, while Britain teetered on the last thin edge of survival, was to run the risk of having the former king co-opted by the Germans with a promise to restore him on the throne, if he would declare himself for them on the eve of the invasion of England already in preparation.

Alive to the dangers, British Ambassador Sir Samuel Hoare drew upon his considerable powers of persuasion to induce the duke to accept Churchill's offer and move on without further delay to neutral Portugal.

TWO CONDITIONS HAD to be met, Windsor insisted, before he would consent to move on. First, he must know if Churchill had an important job in mind for him; and if so, what it was. Second, his wife had to be raised in status to the level of his royal brothers', and received—if but once—by the king and queen. He refused to expose her and himself again to the cold shoulder that the royal family had shown them 10 months before.

Difficult as it is to believe that the former king of England would impose such a frivolous irrelevance on the prime minister when he was carrying, almost alone, the burden of Britain's fate, the melancholy truth is that Windsor did just this.

WALLY AND THE KING walk hand in hand through the streets of Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, during the famous holiday cruise aboard the Nahlin in 1936.

Partisans of the duke may draw comfort from the fact that he was being goaded by his duchess; her hunger for the styles and titles of Royal Highness was in truth far fiercer than his own.

THE WINDSORS ARRIVED in Lisbon early in July. They saw two flying boats at their moorings on the Tagus River.

Churchill was obliged to notify Windsor that while he and his duchess would be welcome in England, no royal title awaited her. Windsor cabled that under the circumstances he could not return to Britain, but he was ready to serve the king anywhere else, in any capacity. The British ambassador could send the two flying boats back to the starveling coastal command in England.

Churchill came up with an appointment as governor and commander in chief of the Bahamas. The duke reported it to his wife: "Winston said he was sorry, but it's the best he could do. I shall keep my end of the bargain."

Meanwhile, British intelligence had uncovered signs of a German plot to kidnap the Windsors and hold them hostage.

The Windsors, in their own later accounts, affected to find the notion hilarious. Yet a plot of sorts was certainly afoot, one in which they appear to have been, if not active accomplices, at least highly interested parties. Churchill's determination to hurry them off the continent was now matched by Hitler's to lure them to a convenient quasi-neutral country—preferably back to Spain—where the duke would be under German influence, and where his smoldering fury against his king and prime minister could be exploited to Germany's advantage.

SPANIARDS WHO CALLED on him were soon informing Madrid that in addition to proclaiming his opposition to the war and his support of a negotiated peace, the duke was saying that England could be bombed into surrender; and that if he had remained king, England would not have gone to war.

The German foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, set in motion a scheme to slip Windsor from under the British diplomatic and intelligence network in Lisbon, and spirit him back to Spain, with the cooperation of Spanish Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner.

On July 11, von Ribbentrop outlined his scheme in a telegram to his adroit ambassador in Madrid, Eberhard von Stohrer: Spanish friends of the Windsors were to invite them to Spain for a fortnight or so, "on pretexts which would appear plausible to (the duke), to the Portuguese, and to the British agents." Once across the frontier, however, "the duke and his wife must be persuaded or compelled to remain on Spanish territory."

Were the duke to have a change of heart, then, being still a British officer and still attached to the expeditionary force that had been defeated in France, he could be legally arrested by the Spanish authorities as "a military fugitive."

AS FOR THE USE that Germany had in mind for him, von Ribbentrop said, "Germany is determined to force England to peace by every means of power and upon this happening, would be prepared to accommodate any desire expressed by the duke, especially with a view to the assumption of the English throne by the duke and the duchess."

Though evidence is lacking that Windsor was ever drawn to the German scheme, however fleetingly, or, for that matter, that it was ever broached directly to him, there is no doubt about the strong pull on him from Spain, or of his apathy toward the Bahamas post, or of his volubility about his private and official frustrations.

In the midst of war, officials pause to fetch the duchess' bathing suit

The duchess' autobiographical account mentions that Windsor suspected that Churchill might have him arrested in British jurisdiction for refusing to obey the order to proceed to the Bahamas.

Von Ribbentrop sent a senior agent, Walter Schellenberg, to Lisbon to mount an operation for whisking the Windsors back across the border into Spain. Schellenberg was one of the handful of covert action specialists in the stable of the notorious Reinhard Heydrich, Heinrich Himmler's chief operator in the business of spying, counterintelligence, kidnapping and other forms of political action and, of course, liquidation as well.

THE PLOT SCHELLENBERG devised was an elaboration of the one first proposed by von Ribbentrop: Aristocratic Portuguese friends would invite the Windsors to spend a few days at a mountain lodge, convenient to the border. The Windsors would accept. A shooting expedition would take the party to "a precisely designated place at a particular time," where a Portuguese frontier captain would obligingly look the other way. A Spanish patrol would happen past, to offer instant protection; and Schellenberg's strong-arm squad, hovering near, would fend off any intervention by the Portuguese or British.

The duke's step must appear wholly voluntary, prompted by his revulsion from the war, and accomplished with the help of Spanish friends interested only in giving him sanctuary in a free political climate.

What happened next is not manifest in documents yet accessible. But something happened, for the plot collapsed—suddenly, and so thoroughly that only two days later, on July 28, German intelligence was informing Berlin that the Windsors were about to leave for the Bahamas after all!—they would sail on Aug. 1.

WHAT IS ONE TO make of Windsor's behavior? Was he serious about skipping back into Spain? Was he ever tempted by the delusion that he could be crowned at Westminster, as Britain's quisling king, with his duchess beside him, on the throne where his great-grandmother, his grandmother, his mother and his brother's wife had all been crowned?

History is unlikely to find a clear answer. Windsor himself could never be drawn into a frank discussion of his understandings with his Spanish and Portuguese friends.

Both of the duke's negotiations—for an HRH for his wife and for a post of prestige for himself—having failed so dismally, the duchess showed him how such affairs should be handled.

Lisbon's beautiful suburban beaches reminded the duchess that she had left a favorite bathing suit behind at La Croe. Forthwith she notified the American minister at Lisbon that she would be grateful if he would have his colleague, the American consul at Nice, retrieve it for her. Although that part of the Riviera was now occupied by the enemy, and La Croe was locked and shuttered, and the duchess wasn't sure exactly where the costume could be found, she said that the consul would have no trouble recognizing it: It was Nile green.

In the midst of war, minister and consul did her bidding, and the costume was duly fetched. Perhaps because of its color, perhaps for other reasons, American foreign service officers remember the episode as the Cleopatra whim.

Revised CV Master Plan adoption on the horizon?

WILL THE REVISED Carmel Valley Master Plan be ready for implementation by the dawn of the new decade?

Or will the debate that has surrounded the revision since its inception 2½ years ago drag on into 1980?

The Monterey County Planning Commission approved the Master Plan revision at its meeting Oct. 24, but critics say the plan is still fraught with major problems.

One critic, Carl Hooper of Bestor Engineers, contends that the county planners heard only a fraction of public comment on the proposed Master Plan, although it was discussed in detail at five separate planning commission meetings this summer.

Hooper claims that there is not a chance that the Board of Supervisors can approve the plan before March 1980. He said last week that there are too many problems and too little comment in the wake of the plan's approval by the planning commission.

But Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel said there is "very little" in the plan the board can discuss. He said it was thoroughly examined by the planning commission.

Supervisors will probably schedule the Master Plan for a public hearing on Nov. 27, and there is nothing to stop the board from approving it by 1980, Farr declared in rebuttal to Hooper's comments.

THIS SPARRING MATCH between Farr and Hooper was sparked at a meeting Oct. 30 during the discussion of the moratorium on new development in Carmel Valley. The supervisors unanimously approved an eight-month extension to July 3, 1980, of the emergency ordinance. It is intended to remain in effect until the Master Plan is adopted, at which time the ordinance will be repealed.

The interim ordinance was first enacted last July as part of an agreement to have a lawsuit dropped by the city of Carmel, the Carmel Area Coalition and Mary Arnn of Mission Fields. The lawsuit charged that the county General Plan was inadequate for land use decisions.

The purpose of the moratorium, which would have expired Nov. 3, was to protect the area in Carmel Valley that will be under the jurisdiction of the Master Plan.

THE SUPERVISORS HEARD requests last week that specific parcels of land be excluded from the interim ordinance.

Charles Page, a Monterey attorney, asked that four parcels in the Aguajito area be withdrawn not only from the moratorium ordinance, but also from the Master Plan study area.

Hooper, representing Danny Garcia, who wants to subdivide 11 acres into 10 lots in the Rancho Mar Monte subdivision, asked that his parcel be excluded. Hooper also asked that the proposed 1,300-acre Vista Nadura subdivision be withdrawn.

The supervisors refused to grant the requests, noting that it was not the proper time and place to discuss amendments to the Master Plan.

A flat denial was given to Hooper on Vista Nadura because the large project is in the center of the Master Plan study area.

The matter of excluding the Aguajito area, however, was scheduled for further hearing on Nov. 20 at 1:30 p.m. At that time the supervisors will only consider whether the area should be excluded from the moratorium.

The Aguajito area is located at the extreme northwest corner of the Master Plan study area, bordered by the northern ridgeline of the Valley, Jacks' Peak Regional Park to the east, Highway 1 to the west and Canada de la Segunda Ranch to the south. As it relates to the Master Plan study area, Aguajito will be discussed only at the public hearings scheduled for the Master Plan, the supervisors agreed.

SENIOR COUNTY PLANNER Dave Young said that the Master Plan revision was on the supervisors' consent calendar for Nov. 6, and that the planning department recommended it be scheduled for a public hearing on Nov. 27.

"We know they (the supervisors) are in a rush for it," Young said. "They could have set it earlier, on the 20th."

He would not predict whether the supervisors will hold more than one hearing, although he said, "you can't say it (the Master Plan revision) hasn't had ample review and comment."

Young conceded, however, that "some heavy-duty issues" are still in the plan over which the board may be fundamentally divided.

If the supervisors decide changes are necessary, the plan would have to be referred back to the planning commission for comment, forcing a delay that could conceivably stretch into next year, Young said.

"I don't see how it possibly could be approved before the first of the year," Hooper said. He estimated that the revision would be scheduled for a hearing on Dec. 4 at the earliest.

Hooper said, "It (the plan) can't possibly be approved in a single sitting of the board." Noting that the board has only three meetings in December, he said, "This means it will run over into January.

"There are still many controversial things in it—the quota and point system is a totally new procedure; it will warrant a lot of discussion and some changes," Hooper claimed.

The proposed quota and point system would require

HAVE HEARD THAT Sandy Swain will run for mayor. Not bad political thinking. The obvious plot is to try and pull all votes possible away from Howard Brunn, and/or whomever, and if Sandy makes it as mayor, Mike Brown is still in his seat. If Mike could make mayor, then he could appoint Sandy to fill his empty seat.

Interesting thought.

WELL, NOW THAT WE'VE all had our say, and voted the right way, (which is whichever way we vote), we will now have to live with it for awhile, so relax. Smile at your neighbor again and prepare yourself for the next one!

THERE IS SOMETHING SHOCKING to me about a high school class called "Future Shock." I react with a jolt to just reading the words, and I've been trying to figure out why.

Perhaps it's the thought that the future is going to be a shock, not a pleasant one, but one that must be prepared for, like war training. You know, the tough old master sergeant who prepares you for an attack from all sides. Yeah, you learn to survive, but at what cost?

When I was a kid, the future was a challenge, a dream that dangled like a carrot in that "someday" place in front of your nose.

Little kids nowadays still have it, or where would those cowboy boots and fire chief helmets in size two have a place to rest?

But what happens? Somewhere, somehow, between 2 and 20, or 6 and 16, the daydreams are replaced by "Learning to Cope with Stress" or "Proper Feeding of a Computer" or "Technological Manualization of Modes of Entry Into Forward Placed Centuries."

I think I'll go dig out my cowboy boots from the attic trunk and sleep with them again, just like I used to.

Maybe I'll feel better.

I'M WRITING THIS PARTICULAR section before the voting. The main thing to watch out for now is that if, by some slim chance, the city administrator measure loses, the majority of the council will try and put its "proposed changes" (that it wanted last spring, which was what helped start the whole thing) into effect.

Don't forget, one of the proposed changes was the elimination of the section in which a council member could not become city administrator for at least one year after holding his council seat.

If that were changed, we just might end up with Norberg, Gross or even Brown as our city administrator.

Another interesting thought.

HOWARD BRUNN HAS been receiving a bit of criticism over the last few months for showing his impatience with matters and members of the council.

My mother used to tell me, "Do not be quick to criticize another until you have walked for one month in his moccasins."

Actually, Howard has been under great self-control, considering the conditions, at times, that the council works under.

Howard does get impatient when items on the agenda take hours to go through, or don't get settled at all. But when even "light" agendas make the meetings go until 12:30 or 1:30 a.m., it's not easy to be patient. But those of us that were present when Howard chaired several meetings, as Mayor Pro-Tem, saw that the agenda was gone through efficiently, easily and everybody was in bed before midnight.

That in itself is something!

WERE YOU AMONG the llama-walk watchers? What fun! Those nice beasties had lovely manners and belied their camel relationship by not even spitting once.

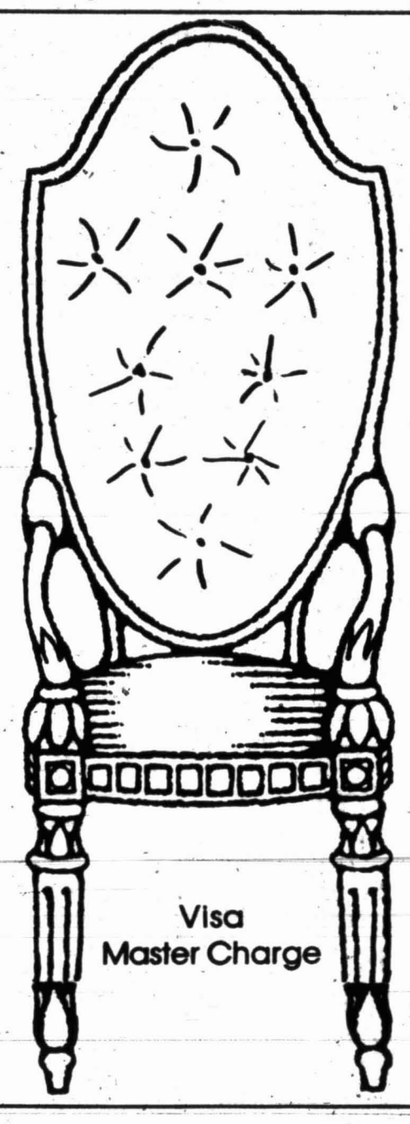

As they came parading down Ocean Avenue with all the happy people in tow, I heard the sounds of a memory—old-time circus parades.

Oh, the magic of those sounds, and the fascinating strange animals that suddenly had sprung off the pages of our school books and were marching past our popping eyes. We squealed in terror at the tiger and lion, and swung our arms in front of our noses, making like the big elephants, and finally slept that night with the most delicious, frightful dreams where we were the brave hunters that had captured these exotic creatures single-handed, and rode on their backs in triumph.

A little bit of that was on our own main street this week. Thanks, Kim. Hope you do it every year.

THE USE OF the political technique of trying to split votes by agreement beforehand, of what "reward" would be given, is very possibly against the law. The "If I win, I'll appoint you to fill my seat" is not only dirty pool, it is, to use an expression, "unforgivable."

developments to compete for approval. Total development would be held to a maximum of 2,500 new units during the plan's life, which is 20 years or until the year 2000. Individual developments would be further limited to only 25 new units per year.

BECAUSE CHANGES proposed by the supervisors in this or other parts of the plan would bring it back to the planning commission for comment, Hooper said that the new Master Plan will not be in shape for adoption until next March.

Farr said, "I think we've beaten the thing to death. The compromises have been made. A lot of people who you wouldn't expect are going to support its adoption."

Hooper represents a minority viewpoint, according to Farr. Farr said, "These people have chipped away at the plan, and the planning commission heard their comments. There's very little that the board can do but approve it."

'I think we've beaten the thing (Master Plan) to death. The compromises have been made. A lot of people who you wouldn't expect are going to support its adoption.'—Supervisor Sam Farr.

Hooper's final comment was that the planning commission repeatedly cut off his presentation, and he would be certain to get in his "piece" at the supervisors' hearing.

AGUAJITO DESERVES to be deleted from both the interim ordinance and the Master Plan study area, according to Page, because it belongs in the planning area for Monterey. Its school and traffic needs are served from outside Carmel Valley, he said, noting that the access to Aguajito is either from Carpenter Street or Aguajito Road, both off Highway 1.

"I was shocked to find the planning line included this area in the proposed Master Plan. The property would be zoned for five-acre minimum, while there is no major residential area in Carmel Valley with that zoning," Page said. "It is the duty of this board to correct this."

Page explained that he had applied for a lot-split on 10 acres in order to build a home for his family on five acres. But he was prevented from filing an application for a minor subdivision because of the moratorium.

Unless his property was excluded, it would force him into further delays, he said. "Thinking that the Master Plan is going to be adoptred within less than several months is fantasy," Page said.

CARMEL CITY ATTORNEY George Brehmer said that the city was not aware of any request to modify the area covered by the moratorium. He said any consideration from the board would have to be based on the primary factor that the Aguajito area is within the ridgeline and viewshed of Carmel Valley.

"You have the feeling you're in a rural valley as long as you can look up and see the mountain joining the sky; it's a natural union," Brehmer said. He urged that the boundary not be changed because it could lead to development along the ridge.

'Thinking that the Master Plan is going to be adopted within less than several months is fantasy'—Charles Page, a Monterey attorney.

Attorney Phillip Oberg, representing the Carmel Area Coalition, concurred with Brehmer's stand. He said that an amendment to the interim ordinance was not "consonant" with the instructions that were agreed upon when the lawsuit was dropped.

According to Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos, there is justification for deleting the Aguajito area because of three factors:

- It is a small area in comparison to the 30,000 acres covered by the Master Plan.
- Development of the area would not prejudice planning goals.
- Deleting it would conform to reasonable planning.

Ramos emphasized, however, that the land could not be deleted simply to accommodate the landowner.

COUNTY ZONING ADMINISTRATOR Bob Slimmon noted that since work began on the Master Plan revision, landowners had requested that Aguajito be left out.

But Farr said that the rationale for including it in the Master Plan was based on its location within the viewshed of the Valley. He added that it was the opinion of both the county planning director and public works director that the subdivisions along Outlook Drive and in High Meadow within Aguajito "are the ones that got away from us" in terms of sound planning.

"This is a sensitive area that should be included within the Master Plan," Farr said.

The Backyard Horse Lament

(Sung to That Lucky Old Sun)

Up in the morning,
Out to the barn,
Totin' in water and hay,
While that lucky old horse
Has nothing to do
But get into trouble all day.

Back in the evening,
Day's work is done,
But old horse has got to be fed;
Never did get to ride --
There ain't no place to go --
Wish I had me a moped instead.

Once I went riding
Out on the trails,
'Til the fences got built in the way;
Now my lazy old horse
Just keeps eating, of course,
Will I soon have to give him away?

I wish there were people...
And places to ride...
I wish someone cared for the horse;
So I could be free
To enjoy him and me...
The answer's to board him, of course

A VIABLE ALTERNATIVE

If our "saga" sounds familiar...if you wish there were more time and more places to ride...and friendly folks to ride with...consider Rancho Laureles:

For as little as $85 per month, your horse is fed morning and evening, rain or shine, watered and cared for, freeing you from twice-a-day feeding, watering, mucking out. (Remember, it costs at least $40 a month to feed your horse adequately at home, and at Rancho Laureles, we don't cut corners. Our diet of high protein alfalfa cubes is supplemented with oat hay and bran.)

Nowhere to ride? "No trespassing" signs closing in on you? In addition to our spacious riding arena, we have beautiful Garland Ranch Regional Park right in our backyard (no need to ride on Carmel Valley Road to get-there!). And our half-mile lapping track is invaluable for conditioning or getting the edge off a horse who's "feeling good."

We also have individual pipe corrals at $110 per month (sorry, the box stalls are all occupied, but think ahead to our new barn, planned for the very near future).

A bonus: Our farrier observes a regular schedule and our veterinarians are always on call in addition to their routine semi-annual visits.

Want lessons? We have several knowledgeable trainers who offer private lessons -- English, Western, jumping -- at very moderate cost.

To discuss your particular horse-care needs, phone Rancho Laureles Equestrian Center, "the home of happy horses."

- Deluxe TC Ranch pipe corrals safeguard your horse with five-foot-high rails and six-foot dividers between horses to prevent biting or blanket chewing.
- Individual off-the-ground feeders and safe waterers.
- Corrals cleaned and raked morning and evening.
- High-protein (17% guaranteed analysis) alfalfa cubes fed morning and evening. Noon feedings by arrangement.
- Blanketing and turnouts available.
- Spacious, securely fenced arena • Jumps

Easy access to Garland Ranch Regional Park with 541 acres of trails and open space!

Boarding only—Sorry, no rentals!

Trustees approve increase of fees for nursery school

An increase in nursery school fees was approved last week by the board of education of the Carmel Unified School District.

Monthly fees were raised from $10 to $15 for the Parent Co-op Nursery programs at Bay, Tularcitos and Carmelo schools. The new fees go into effect immediately.

The action included an increase in the hourly fee from $1 to $1.50 for the Extended Day Program at Bay School. Guest fees were also increased from $1 to $2 per hour for children who drop in for short periods.

The fee hikes were recommended in a report prepared by district business manager Robert Zampatti, and Dan Yurkovich, director of community services. Their report was based on a projection of income and expenses for the five separate programs, with a comparison to nursery school fees in other districts.

Direct costs for the nursery school programs for fiscal year 1979-80 were estimated to be $40,174; the fee increases will result in a total income of $39,655. Zampatti noted that the increases were suggested primarily to "keep our nursery school program self-sufficient."

Yurkovich said, however, that the trustees should not forget that many parents who use the services are single parents.

"The services are cheap for a reason. We need to do something to help the single parents who are often the lone bread winner for the family and who cannot do without the services," he said.

Board president Clayton Neill added: "Even with the increase, we're still the lowest in the area."

The $15 per month fee will mean the cost for two semesters, or nine months, will be $135. This compares to North Monterey County School District which charges $110, although this is for a three-day program, while the Carmel district program is for five days. For similar five-day programs, the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District charges $162, the Pacific Grove Unified School District $176.

War Memorial dedication

THE FALLEN SOLDIERS of World War I were remembered during a War Memorial dedication in Carmel in 1921 at the intersection of Ocean and San Carlos. This year, Veterans' Day will be observed Sunday, Nov. 11 at 11 a.m. in Carmel at Devendorf Park where Congressman Leon Panetta will be the guest of honor. In addition, taps will be played and the Fort Ord Firing Squad will salute the fallen soldiers of all American wars.

Lot split dispute before supervisors

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors is scheduled to discuss a dispute over a minor subdivision in Carmel Highlands on Tuesday, Nov. 13, at 11:30 a.m.

Constantine Ash of Millbrae has appealed the decision of the planning commission to deny issuing a permit to build a home on his half-acre lot on Spindrift Drive in Yankee Point.

The commission voted unanimously Sept. 27 against the permit, citing "inadequate septic tank capacity." There also is a question whether the parcel was properly subdivided before Ash filed his application to construct a home.

MONTEREY ARCHITECT Donald Wald, representing Ash, contends that the original one-acre lot that Ash owned on Spindrift is already subdivided. He said that the county assessor taxes it as two separate lots.

Ash sold half of the 43,000-square-foot parcel in 1969, according to Wald. He said the owner of that adjoining 22,000-square-foot lot has a valid building permit and coastal permit. It is his contention that Ash should be granted a permit for the remaining 21,000 square feet.

But Wald's claim has no validity with respect to the county subdivision ordinance, according to Wesley Arvig, county planner in charge of minor subdivisions.

"We don't have any subdivision on record. And he (Wald) hasn't shown any evidence of it being subdivided," Arvig said.

ASH'S REQUEST TO build a home on the half-acre lot was denied by the minor subdivision committee last year. The denial was based on: (a) inadequate access to the property from Spindrift Drive because of a steep slope; (b) the half-acre lot was not suitable for a septic tank.

The county Health Department recommended last August that the planning commission deny Ash's application. In a letter dated Aug. 9, the health department ruled: "This is a marginal area for sewage disposal by septic tank even on one acre, much less half an acre."

Frank Hebert, supervising sanitarian for the county Health Department, explained that septic tanks are not allowed on half-acre lots because of a guideline in the Basin Plan of the Regional Water Quality Control Board. He said that the minimum is one acre unless the ground offers "exceptionally good percolation."

THE CARMEL HIGHLANDS is known as a "poor-percolation" area because of its granite base and steep slopes. According to the Areawide Facilities Plan prepared for the Carmel Sanitary District, septic tanks are not feasible in the area.

Last August the supervisors turned down a similar appeal from Mr. and Mrs. William Burrage. Despite an emotional plea from the couple, the supervisors denied the Burrages a permit to build a retirement home on the property that they have owned since 1960.

The Burrages were told to wait until sewers are constructed in the Carmel Highlands. The earliest this is expected, according to the Areawide Facilities Plan, is 1982.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

On being kind

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL
The Oct. 24 invocation delivered to the Carmel Rotary Club

Our life, O Lord, is a gift from Thee—a God given gift and we receive it one day at a time.

Yesterday is gone forever and no amount of moaning and groaning can change what we have done or what we have failed to do. Tomorrow and all that it promises is in God's hands and we have no guarantee that it will be here. We do have today—a gift of love from God.

Help us to realize, to get it through our thick skulls, that the only way we can serve Thee or honor Thee O Lord, is by serving others—yes, just as Rotary tells us to serve others above self. It sounds so simple but how many of us have even tried it?

Finally that busy fellow Anonymous wrote this advice on being kind.

Be careful of the words we say,
Keep them soft and sweet.
We never know from day to day,
Which ones we'll have to eat.

Reclamation plan suffers setback

By STEVE HELLMAN

WITHIN THE SPAN of a week the Carmel Sanitary District has suffered two setbacks in its effort to advance its areawide reclamation project.

Neighboring Pebble Beach Sanitary District (PBSD) abruptly announced Oct. 18 that it was backing out of the $13.7 million project.

Monterey Peninsula Country Club is not interested in joining the project as a user of reclaimed wastewater, according to an announcement Oct. 25.

PBSD withdrawal meant an immediate loss of $34,375 to the project. The amount was PBSD's share of cost for the design phase. The country club's 36-hole golf course promised to be a major disposal source for the implementation phase.

ALTHOUGH NEITHER action halts the project, a heavier burden has been placed on the Carmel Sanitary District because it is the local lead agency.

The sanitary district is currently negotiating agreements with local golf course owners for the use of highly treated wastewater to irrigate the golf courses.

The project is scheduled for completion in 1983, the deadline the sanitary district has been given by the state to halt its summertime disposal of effluent into Carmel Bay.

The announcement of the PBSD withdrawal came at a particularly sensitive time. The State Water Resources Control Board was just about to sign its final approval for a $137,000 grant for the design phase.

"There was some concern from state officials about the Pebble Beach action," said Michael Zambory, manager of the Carmel Sanitary District.

Zambory said the PBSD was wrong to unilaterally pull out of the project since it has a contract to discharge its effluent through the main treatment plant of the Carmel Sanitary District.

"They (PBSD) have tied up one-third of the capacity of our plant," Zambory said. "They just can't arbitrarily beg out on the reclamation project."

PBSD HAD PARTICIPATED in the planning phase of the reclamation project (Step I of the Areawide Facilities Plan). But at the Oct. 18 meeting of the board of directors of the Carmel Sanitary District, PBSD manager Richard Lord said that his district wanted nothing to do with Step II. Step II of the Areawide Facilities Plan is the design of the reclamation project.

Lord gave no explanation for the decision. When Zambory requested it in writing, Lord said his board of directors would vote on a resolution to cement the withdrawal.

The next day, Oct. 19, the Carmel Sanitary District received notice from the State Water Resources Control Board that the Step II grant had been approved. The $137,000 grant, however, is provided on the basis that local agencies will provide matching funds.

Monterey County, PBSD and the Carmel Sanitary District had shared the local agency costs in the Step I planning phase. The county, however, had indicated from the start that it would drop out after Step I.

At its meeting Oct. 25, the PBSD board of directors unanimously approved its resolution to withdraw. The Carmel Sanitary District was left holding the bag for Step II.

ZAMBORY SAID THAT PBSD may still be required to pay its share of the local cost, depending on further negotiations between the two sanitary districts and the county. But for the time being, the Carmel Sanitary District will have to foot the full $137,000 cost to match the state grant.

"Despite their (PBSD) attitude," Zambory said, "we're going ahead with the project."

It was at a special Oct. 25 study session of

Middle School program trimmed

Teachers, parents protest cuts in foreign language courses

By STEVE HELLMAN

ONE IN 10 PERSONS in the United States knows a foreign tongue, while nationally only 15 percent of high school students study a foreign language.

These points were made by Allan Oppenhuizen, foreign language teacher at Carmel High School, in a presentation last week to the board of education of the Carmel Unified School District.

Oppenhuizen was joined by a parade of parents who decried the cuts made this year in French, Spanish and German classes at Carmel Middle School.

The trustees took no action, however, because the presentation was an information item and not scheduled for board action. It was one of a series of status reports that are being presented to the trustees by each department in the district.

District Superintendent Dr. Carl Wilsey explained that the cuts resulted from the reduction to a five period day at Middle School.

"Middle School was hit hardest by the budget cuts that have resulted from Proposition 13," he said. "We're trying to move back a six period day. We have the options to build it back next year."

BUD CHAPPLE, CHAIRMAN of the language department since 1965, echoed Wilsey's explanation, saying, "It was tough to fill schedules with only five periods."

But Barbara Sanford, a veteran board watcher and candidate for the school board in Tuesday's election said that the Middle School program should not have been cut to five periods. She noted that it required only about $13,000 to restore six periods at the high school.

Sanford said that the language program could have been spared if the trustees had sought to preserve six periods at the same expense for Middle School.

GERMAN WAS DROPPED completely from the sixth and seventh grade curriculum at Middle School, language teacher Shelley Titcomb said. French and Spanish were offered only on an every-other-day basis, alternating with physical education, she added.

Next year, Titcomb warned, German will be dropped from the eighth grade unless "the school board realizes the necessity of reinstating a strong foreign language program.

"Students learn languages best at younger ages. But now they can't take German until high school," Titcomb said.

OPPENHUIZEN, CHAIRMAN of the foreign language program at Carmel High School, said that the cuts had forced teachers to combine classes and had seriously hampered the "trimester" experiment.

The trimester program was introduced at the Middle School in 1975, Oppenhuizen said, to allow sixth grade students to select the language they wanted to study. The students were taught German, French and Spanish for 12 weeks each within one semester, then were allowed to select one for a permanent subject.

The elimination of German, he said, forced mixed classes at the high school with beginning and advanced students.

"From a professional standpoint, it is not satisfactory. You end up devoting all your time to the beginners and the advanced are left to themselves," Oppenhuizen said.

The cuts at Middle School affected a language program at the high school that is already under "tremendous tension," according to Oppenhuizen.

"We're neither fish nor fowl. We're not required for graduation, but we're required for entry into the universities," he told the trustees.

Because language classes are a "strenuous discipline," Oppenhuizen said students drop them first when the study load becomes heavy in other classes.

He said that by the second semester in his French and German classes, English is banned for classroom communication.

THE BACKDROP TO this, Oppenhuizen said, is that United States citizens are woefully lacking in other languages. It showed, for example, when United States businessmen tried to establish trade relations with China earlier this year and fell short on several accounts because of a lack of communication. He noted, also, the embarrassment President Carter suffered when his translator "let him down in Poland."

He told the trustees that a solution was urgently needed to restore the sixth grade language curriculum. He said a report would be prepared and presented to the trustees sometime this semester.

IN THE CARMEL school district, about 50 percent of the students have consistently enrolled in the language program, according to figures presented by Wilsey. But this year the enrollment dropped to 47 percent, partly because of the elimination of a volunteer Latin course.

Oppenhuizen credited language study with opening many doors to other cultures in the world.

Titcomb explained that foreign language study offers a student a better knowledge of the world, practical skills that can be carried over into other fields of work, and a better understanding of our own vocabulary and grammar.

She also noted that foreign language was rated the most popular study last year at both Middle School and Carmel High School. She said that students had been particularly happy with the trimester program.

"I WANT MY KID to get exercise and learn a foreign language, said Patricia Bernardi, a parent of a sixth grader. "But sharing P.E. with language cheats both programs."

Debbie O'Neill, who noted she and her husband are multi-lingual, said that they were excited when they moved here from the East Coast and found languages offered to their child in Middle School. "We were sorely disappointed when this program was chosen for cuts," she said.

Dick Radowicz said that the most frequent complaint he has heard as a parent was that the language program was being offered on alternative days, or only three hours per week.

TITCOMB NOTED THAT students cannot retain language study unless it is applied constantly without such breaks.

The bottom line to the issue, said Dorothy Crivello, who has a child at Middle School, is to return to six periods.

Lou Langley agreed with Crivello. Parents are tired of "having to settle for mediocrity in education," she said.

"We're very distressed and we want the board to know it should re-evaluated where we're going with our education program," Langley said. Her comment drew loud applause.

ALLEN OPPENHUIZEN, foreign language teacher at Carmel High School, gave an impassioned plea last week for support for the French, German and Spanish classes. In a status report to the board of education, Oppenhuizen decried cuts in the language curriculum at Carmel Middle School. "It further deepens our lack of expertise in understanding foreign cultures," he said. (Steve Hellman photo)

Beach at Point Lobos named in honor of late photographer Edward Weston

COLE WESTON (left) and Ansel Adams are exultant after the U.S. Board on Geographic Names approved at its meeting Oct. 25 the name "Weston Beach" for an area on the south side of Point Lobos. Both men had given the board evidence for use of the name, which was proposed by Adams to honor the late photographer Edward Weston, Cole's father. A personal name proposed for a geographic feature will not be adopted unless the individual is deceased and unless it is determined to be in the public interest. The individual should have been directly associated with the feature. Weston took many photographs of the areas of Point Lobos, capturing their beauty on film.

Sanitary district reclamation plan suffers setbacks

the directors of the Carmel Sanitary District that Zambory announced that the Monterey Peninsula Country Club was not interested in signing an agreement to use treated wastewater.

"They're opposed to the very thought of using wastewater," Zambory said. "It's not going to kill the project. But it's hurting us. We're hoping they'll come back for an agreement."

ZAMBORY WAS INFORMED of the country club's refusal at a meeting in September of the PBSD board of directors. Several of the PBSD directors are members of the country club. Since then, evidence has emerged that it was one director who was involved in both decisions against the reclamation project.

Elmer Shriner, chairman of the PBSD board of directors, is a current member of the country club and its former treasurer and secretary.

Asked last week if he was involved in the position taken by the country club against the project, Shriner told this reporter: "They asked my opinion and I gave them my thoughts."

What about PBSD's decision to withdraw? "That was a board decision, not just mine," he said.

"We participated in Step I of the Areawide Facilities Plan," Shriner said. "We participated in the improvements on Carmel's new secondary treatment plant in 1971. But the reclamation project was dreamed up by the Carmel Sanitary District. We were never involved in it."

Zambory said, "We understand where Pebble Beach is coming from. They're against the reclamation project because they oppose the ASBS."

THE STATE WATER Resources Control Board designated the ASBS (Area of Special Biological Significance) for Carmel Bay in 1975. The ASBS led to a restriction on the amount of effluent that could be discharged into Carmel Bay. This resulted in — among other things — the ban on annexations within the Carmel Sanitary District. It also resulted in restrictions on the amount of effluent that could be discharged from Pebble Beach area. It also led to an order from the state that summertime disposal from the main treatment plant be halted by 1983.

The ASBS was designated to prevent potential damage to marine life in Carmel Bay from an ever-increasing amount of effluent. The $13.7 million reclamation project was chosen as the alternative to dumping effluent into the bay.

Zambory decried the stand taken by PBSD, saying: "They have got their heads stuck in the sand."

The local golf courses, PBSD and the entire Monterey Peninsula and Carmel Valley will benefit from the reclamation project, Zambory said, because:

- It will protect Carmel Bay against the potential damage from effluent discharge.
- It will provide a stable source of good water for the local golf courses.
- It will make more potable water available to residents.

ZAMBORY SAID THAT the Carmel Sanitary District has received letters of intention to enter into an agreement for wastewater from the following golf courses: Rancho Canada, Cypress Point, Pebble Beach Corporation (which controls Spyglass Hill), and the Northern California Golf Association, which is building two additional golf courses in the Del Monte Forest.

Zambory said that the PBSD decision was also ill-conceived because the federal government is prepared to "pick up the tab for 87 percent of this project."

He referred to the grants that are administered through the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). In early October the EPA approved an $875,000 grant for the design phase of the project. Whether or not the reclamation project is completed, the design phase will include important construction such as improvements to equipment at the treatment plant, Zambory said. Ultimately, the EPA is expected to provide about $10 million of the $13.7 million cost for the reclamation project.

Operation conditions satisfy opponents

Tantamount Theater permit wins final approval

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE ANTAGONISM THAT had stalled the rebulilding of the Tantamount Theater was soothed last week as a final decision was reached on the use permit for the once-popular Carmel Valley landmark.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors voted 4-1 to approve a use permit that will allow owner Francois Martin and his business manager Rene Sonne to reconstruct the 144-seat theater on Middle Canyon Road. A fire last year destroyed the theater after Martin had operated it for more than 20 years as a "labor of love."

The supervisors decided not to revise the conditions that were attached to the use permit by the planning commission. The conditions restricted the operation to Friday-Sunday nights, with 15 days set aside for additional Thursday performances. A maximum of 156 days of operation per year will be allowed for movies and live performances. This will not include rehearsals.

MARTHA COOPER LANG, the leading oponent and an immediate neighbor on Middle Canyon Road, said after the meeting that she would not file a lawsuit to halt the reconstruction.

Although she had initially sought to halt the use permit before the planning commission, then later pushed to limit the operaton to Friday and Saturday nights only, Lang conceded that three nights per week was a fair compromise.

"I feel fine about it," she said of the supervisors' decision. "We didn't want the theater to operate any more than it had and I think we broke even on that point.

"The theater without Francois was our main fear," she said.

It was an unspoken but recognized concern throughout the hearings that Martin's failing health has forced him to play a less active role since 1975. Coupled with this was an underlying suspicion about Sonne's motives for leading the effort to rebuild the theater.

But Lang appeared satisfied that the conditions on the use permit will adequately restrict any new operator.

The concern among the opponents had been that the former low-key Tantamount could be turned into a busy commercial venture.

SUPERVISOR SAM FARR, however, pointed out that the use permit held restrictions, but did not preclude someone from turning the Tantamount into a profitable operation. Reluctant to allow the reconstruction, he said, "I've gotten a lot of phone calls on this. When we issue this use permit, you (Sonne) walk out of here with a marketable commodity.

"It could become a commercial venture like no one ever believed," Farr said. But he added that the restrictions were clear concerning the days of operation.

Voting to approve the use permit, Farr added that the "law was clear" on the right to rebuild the theater.

DESPITE ITS STATUS As a legal non-conforming use, the County Counsel's office determined that the Tantamount could be rebuilt because less than 75 percent of the assessed value of the property was lost in the fire.

MARTHA COOPER LANG was smiling last week at the hearing of the Board of Supervisors concerning the Tantamount Theater. Mrs. Lang set aside her previous opposition to the reconstruction of the theater. She accepted the supervisors' decision to grant a use permit that will restrict the theater to performances on three nights per week. Mrs. Lang said that she would not file a lawsuit. (Steve Hellman photo)

Lang's attorney, Nick Kraushaar of Salinas, argued at a previous hearing Oct. 16 that the county erred in not assessing the theater as a total loss. He said it should not have included Martin's adjoining residence in the assessment of the damage to the non-conforming use.

At the Oct. 16 meeting, the supervisors accepted the County Counsel's interpretation, but in an effort to compromise ordered Sonne to produce theater records showing that the theater operated three nights per week before the fire. Otherwise, the supervisors were inclined to heed the opponents' arguments and limit the use permit to only Friday and Saturday operation.

Sonne failed to supply thorough evidence at the Oct. 30 meeting to support Sunday showings. But in an ironic twist, the opponents presented a tally of performances through the years since 1960. Taken from the entertainment pages of the local newspapers, the tally showed that the theater operated on Friday and Saturday nights up until 1975. It revealed that in 1976 movies were shown regularly on Sundays.

BECAUSE EXPANSION OF a non-conforming use is illegal, the neighbors would have had an argument in 1976 when the Sunday movies started, according to county zoning administrator Bob Slimmon.

But as Slimmon noted, "The neighbors lived for years with the operation, including the increase to Sundays in 1976. It (Sunday shows) went on for three years without us knowing about it. There were no complaints from the neighbors of which we were aware."

Kraushaar argued that according to the tally the most performances for any one year had been 150 in 1977. He said that the county was allowing more use if it approved 156 nights per year.

Sonne's attorney, Melvin Steiner of Carmel, said that the tally did not take into account the charity performances and private benefits that did not appear in the entertainment ads.

There were as many as 24 live performances per year in the 1960s, Steiner noted. Because of Martin's health, the performances were cut back in the 1970s.

Of the added Sunday shows after 1975, he said, "The neighbors were totally aware of the use and never objected."

SUPERVISOR BARBARA Shipnuck said that her decision to support the three nights per week weighed heavily on the fact that neighbors did not complain after the use increased in 1976.

One neighbor, however, who asked not to be identified, told this reporter that most of the neighborhood felt it would not be kind to complain when Martin had just suffered a succession of strokes and a heart attack in 1975.

Supervisor Dusan Petrovic cast the lone dissenting vote. He argued that the use permit was not proper unless the county based it on the extent of the theater's use in 1958 when it technically became a legal non-conforming use.

Fine points of the law, however, gave way to the overriding feeling, as Farr put it, that "no one should be able to take advantage of the fire."

Following the decision, Martin said, "I have my puppeteers trained and we'll be ready to produce shows as soon as the theater is rebuilt."

Sonne said that the reconstruction time would depend on financing. He said he hoped the resentment among the neighbors was a thing of the past. If not, he said, he might consider relocating the theater.

The time has come, as they say in show business, to let the show go on.

MPT expands fare zone for Serra , but not Carmel High

Junipero Serra School students will no longer have to pay a two-zone fare to ride the Monterey Peninsula Transit bus into Carmel Valley. The cost will be 35 cents instead of the previous 70 cents.

The relief was accomplished by expanding the boundary of the Carmel Valley zone to include the school.

The action was approved Monday by the board of directors of the transit company. It came at the request of parents who did not want their children crossing Highway 1 to catch the bus in front of Brinton's where the fare is for one zone into the Valley.

The directors, however, denied a request to either move the Valley zone to include Carmel High School or provide discount tickets to the high school students. Because they are a quarter-mile outside the zone, the students have to pay 70 cents or walk along Highway 1 to Brinton's.

Tom Albert, manager of the transit company, had indicated that expanding the boundary to include the high school or providing discounts to students would force significant losses in the company's revenue.

The possible alternatives discussed by the directors included selling tickets to the school district which would re-sell them to the students at a lower price. Or the school district might investigate if the state or county would improve the pedestrian walk along Highway 1.

The directors asked Albert to prepare a report to determine the extent of need at the high school for some kind of relief. Albert will present the report at the directors' next meeting, Dec. 10.

CHS principal to meet parents

The Padre Parents Club of Carmel High School will meet Friday, Nov. 9, at 12:15 p.m. in Principal Dan Stevenson's office.

Matters of concern to Carmel High parents will be discussed and all are welcome to attend.

Turkey shoot to benefit CV firemen

Sharpshooters will take aim and fire Sunday, Nov. 11 at an old-fashioned Turkey Shoot without the turkeys to be conducted at the Laguna Seca Firing Range, located at the intersection of Highway 68 and Los Laureles Grade, nine miles east of Monterey. The fund-raising event for the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Company and Carmel Valley Youth Center will continue from 9 a.m.-4 p.m.

Square shooters will fire at bulls-eye targets with their own or sponsor-provided 12 gauge shotguns. The winner of each round will be awarded a turkey or ham. Children may also participate with BB guns. No factory made chokes will be allowed.

In addition, bingo games will be played throughout the day and refreshments served.

The cost per round will be determined by the turnout.

Carmelo I remains undefeated in soccer league

Unbeaten Carmelo I kept its record untarnished by defeating Carmelo II, 4-1 in a Junior League match of the Carmel Youth Soccer on Oct. 23. Carmelo II had been unbeaten, too, going into the match.

Scoring for Carmelo I were Bobby Carroll with three goals and Jim Courtney. Scoring the lone goal for Carmelo II was Chris Callahan.

Tuesday, Oct. 23, featured an inter-school match between Woods School and River III. River III emerged victorious behind the four-goal scoring of Michael Cox. Scoring the lone goal for Woods was Jeff LeTowt.

The Thursday, Oct. 25, match between Tularcitos I and Tularcitos II, and the match between River I and River II were cancelled because of heavy morning rains.

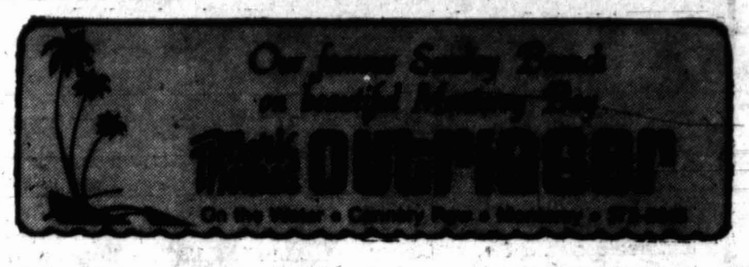

On Saturday, Oct. 27, the four Valley teams and the four city teams met at Carmel Middle School for inter-school competition.

Tularcitos I loaned shorthanded Woods a couple of its players and Woods used them to good advantage as it downed Tularcitos I, 4-1. Scoring for Woods were Brett Ledbetter, who had two goals, Jeff Alexander and Kurt Shakal. Paul Hastey scored the lone goal for Tularcitos I.

Tularcitos II narrowly defeated River III, 2-1. David Stainbrook scored twice for Tularcitos II and Michael Cox scored for River III.

Undefeated Carmelo I had to rally to tie River II, 2-2. Scoring all the goals for Carmelo I was Bobby Carroll. Steven Fearn scored both goals for River II.

Carmelo II defeated River I, 3-1, to give the Valley teams the edge in victories this week. Scoring for Carmelo II were Nick Trudeau, Chris Gallahan and Damon Maggiore. Scoring River I's only goal was Brian Crummey.

Trick or treat for Kim Novak

By RON RUSSELL

KIM NOVAK went trick-or-treating in Carmel on Halloween night with an entourage of 29 friends — 20 humans and nine llamas.

The human friends seems to have had a delightful time, but the nine llamas, with their haughty expression and smug eyes, seemed thoroughly unimpressed with the holiday, Carmel, or their celebrated escort. Snubbing such traditional Halloween treats as Milky Way bars or homemade cookies, the llamas showed preference for a handful of dry, crunchy grain.

Miss Novak and her friends were collecting treats and money for two charitable organizations.

They walked (and hoofed) down Ocean Avenue, going from shop to shop collecting treats and storing them in pumpkins marked Ashton School for Orthopedically Handicapped Children in Salinas, and the University of California at Davis Animal Health Research Fund.

MISS NOVAK AND her friends are members of the High Llama Society, a name which, when read downward, stands for "Health is Living and Loving Animals, Mankind and Society." (You'll have to strain a bit to get all the letters right, so just take my word for it.)

The High Llama Society is a social group which takes monthly hikes in various scenic localities and also sponsors charitable work.

"This is our first holiday event," said Miss Novak, "but if it's successful we'd like to do this for all the holidays. On Christmas we could use the large llamas to carry the three Wise Men."

She also said that as far as money goes, "We don't have any goals. We'll be pleased to get whatever we can."

WEARING A CLOWN costume in a hodgepodge of colors — green coat, black and white polka dot hat and yellow rubber boots — and enunciating "trick or treat" in that sexy, subtlely raspy voice, Kim flashed her showgirl smile to the crowds lining Carmel's streets until her pumpkin was weighted with coins.

Among Miss Novak's weirdly costumed friends were werewolfs, clowns, and even an accordian player sporting a gaudy Arabian outfit. Miss Novak's brown llama was equally and regally outfitted with a saddle that supported an array of Teddy bears and other stuffed toy animals.

Noting that Miss Novak's llama seemed quite jealous of her attention, we sidestepped its back legs, fearing an indelicate kick, but Miss Novak comforted us saying, "Don't worry, they don't kick; however if they get extremely mad, they do spit." The llama gave us a cold, threatening stare and rolled those rubbery lips as an added threat. We stepped away from Miss Novak and her llama, thinking we'd prefer the kick.

DONING A CLOWN'S mask for charity, Kim Novak introduces her llama to the bartender of Maxwell McFly's Watering Hole on Halloween night. Kim Novak and 20 of her friends were collecting money and treats for Ashton School for Orthopedically Handicapped Children in Salinas, and for the University of California at Davis Animal Health Rsearch Fund. Although friendly, the llama was a ham and continually upstaged Miss Novak.

LIKE THE PIED Piper of Hamlin, the farther Kim Novak walked the more followers she attracted. Here the parade is just taking shape on Mission Street. By the time Miss Novak reached Ocean Avenue, hundreds of people lined the streets.

More thoughts on the arts

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Affairs

SINCE THE ESTABLISHMENT of the Republic, observers of American society have proclaimed the incompatibility of democracy with the attainment of high standards of excellence in the arts.

A significant minority, however, has never accepted this judgment. This minority has sought to prove two things: democracy is capable of fostering works of artistic excellence as any aristocracy and, more important, that it is capable of creating a far broader audience for them than any other form of society. Indeed, there have long been thoughtful people among us who believe that the ultimate test of democracy lies lies in the quality of the artistic and intellectual life it creates and supports.

It has, however, taken a long time for this view to receive wide recognition. In the 18th century the question that preoccupied thoughtful people in the United States was the achieving of political democracy. In the 19th century, the question was one of achieving economic democracy. In the 20th century, the main challenge to the United States is the achieving of cultural democracy. What is significant is that the question of achieving cultural democracy — and the ways and means of doing it — has become a question that many are asking and many are actively working to answer.

Within our reach is the possibility of developing a standard of living assuring education and leisure in undreamed of abundance. Our economy has transformed work making it less physically taxing and at the same time it has raised the individual's level of productivity freeing more of his time for pursuits often more stimulating than those of the working day. Social and welfare programs have tempered the impact of age-old social and physical hazards.

The first result of these changing conditions have been an emphasis on material acquisition and passive enjoyment. It is true that many individual wants remain unsatisfied. It is also true that our productive system, with its marvelous capacity for innovation, will continue to open new fields for the consumer.

But there is a growing realization that simple materialism cannot permanently satisfy a society, that political and economic progress alone cannot satisfy spiritual hunger, that entertainment which makes no demand upon the mind or the body offers neither a permanent enrichment of the spirit nor a full measure of delight.

With this realization has come a general re-evaluation of the role of the arts in society. We are beginning to see them as the culmination of other achievements — the attainment that in the end gives a society its hope for a lasting place in history and its people the chance for the fullest freedom and happiness.

WHILE THE ARTS do not make society or its individual members more energetic or efficient, arts are a source of simple enjoyment and delight, hence, of refreshment and renewal. They are also educating and civilizing and can provide a sense of the grace, power, enchantment, and beauty of which the creative impulse is capable. And, at their greatest, the arts are exalting with some of religion's moral and mystical power.

These are the terms in which the arts are best justified. Yet there are others. A society characterized by a serious lack of interest in or attention to a classically important area of human endeavor does not fully serve the aspirations of all its people. Nor does it realize its full strength in the present or prepare adequately for the future. The society which creates scientists by diminishing the ranks of its philosophers may in the end have little need for either.

Increased leisure also creates a social imperative for the development of the arts. It has been clearly demonstrated that the use of this leisure can be both an individual and a community problem if it is not channeled into constructive and satisfying ranges of activity such as the arts afford.

For young people the arts offer a way of finding themselves in what they often view as a baffling world. Art, in short, reminds us of our better nature in a world that too easily forgets and places the crises and torments of the moment in a larger perspective. Many social and political forces have combined at this moment of history both to compel interest in the arts and to justify that interest in practical terms.

The intersection of these forces provides an unparalleled opportunity for the arts and the nation, particularly since it occurs at a moment when a surge of vitality in the arts themselves has brought their needs and their delights to the attention of the national consciousness as never before. Wisely applied all these factors can lead to an environment more conducive to distinguished performance, to a larger and more appreciative audience, and to a higher lever of artistic accomplishment.

Hasn't it often been stated that in history's final analysis a nation would be judged by the quality of the civilization it achieved not by its material well being?

ITS IS NOT TOO EARLY to consider reserving your seats for the Carmel Festival of Dance presentation of Abrasevic, the celebrated Yugoslavian dance ensemble, appearing at Sunset Theater on Thursday, Dec. 13, since most of the center section is already sold out.

When Abrasevic played its premiere tour of North American cities and festivals, it took audiences and critics everywhere completely by surprise — and by storm! Thunderous ovations followed one show-stopping number after another and critics were unanimous in acclaiming the handsomely costumed and choreographed production one of the most spellbinding folkloric spectacles to tour the continent in years.

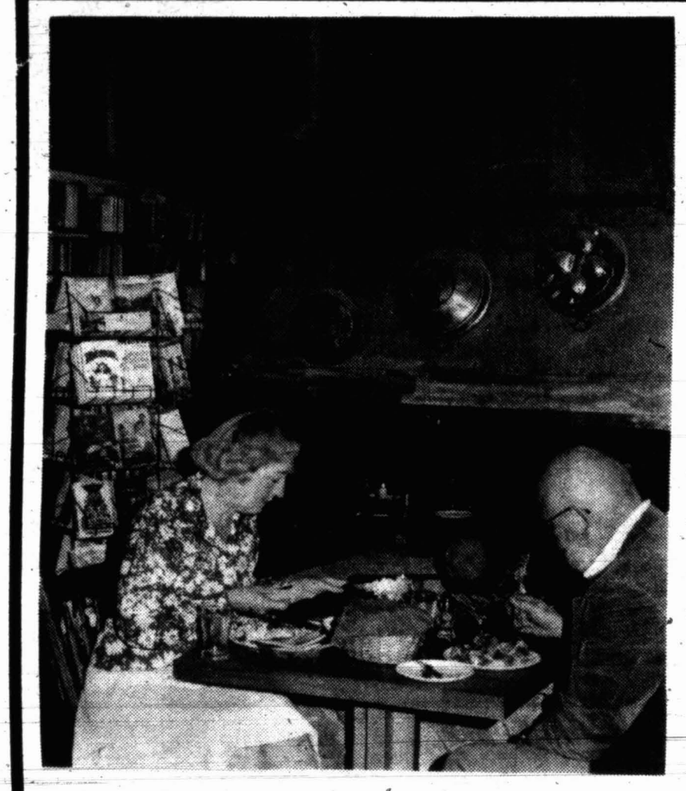

Founded in 1905, Abrasevic was named after the great Serbian poet, Kosta Abrasevic, and was dedicated to training Yugoslavia's youth in the performing arts. Today it ranks as one of the most unusual and exciting companies of its kind in the world. It has presented more than 2,000 performances internationally to a combined audience of more than six million people. It has won coveted gold medals and first prizes at more than a score of international folk and art festivals and has been highly acclaimed by the press and public everywhere.

Featuring 70 magnificent young dancers, singers, gymnasts, specialty artists, and musicians ranging in age from 7 to 18 years, attired in more than 1,000 costumes, Abrasevic presents a fast-moving, colorful spectacle of songs and dances in a manner that seems to defy the laws of gravity, speed, and sound. Trained since the age of four, these young people perform with incredible polish, precision, and skill.

Tickets can be reserved by calling the Director's office at Sunset Center, 624-3996, or by coming into the office to purchase them. The tickets are priced at $6.75 and $5.75. This is a show for the entire family so make your reservations now.

Bountiful Vintage '79 harvest promised

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

VINTAGE 1979 BEGAN officially in Reims, France, in the antique province of Champagne on Wednesday, Oct. 3. It will be a bountiful harvest, both in quantity and quality.

A disastrous freeze at the time of the flowering in 1978 cut the quantity so drastically, all the Champagne houses faced dipping into their precious reserves to maintain their normal markets.

The French Revolution is not forgotten in this agricultural province; the farmers, some 17,000 grape-growers, control 85 percent of the production. They play an equally dominant role in the economic factors governing Champagne production. The famous names of the great houses might seem to be the reigning lords of the region, as once it was the Church. But today it is the Comite Interprofessionnel du Vin de Champagne (CIVC), which not only set the date of the harvest, governs the price of grapes but as well allocates to 150 firms their continuity of grapes from the 62,500 acres in production.

Only three varieties are permitted for cultivation: Chardonnay, the one white grape, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meuniere, the latter of less importance in the finer cuvees, or blends of current taste-vogue. All the plantations in the Vallee de la Marne, the Montagne de Reims and the Cote des Blancs below Epernay were evaluated long ago for the quality of their potential production, soil, exposure, plantation and so on, on a par basis of 100. Growers are paid on the numerical evaluation of the par scale for their grapes.

NATURALLY, THE HOUSES of grande marque all want a big share of the 80 - 90 percent rated Chardonnay and Pinot Noir. Only a few houses, like Taittinger and Roederer, own significant acreage of their own. The rest must rely upon rulings of the CIVC which allocates on the basis of the age of the firm, sales of the previous year and current need.

By regulation, all Champagne must be aged at least one year, but few, even the cheapest brands, will work with three-years on the yeasts before disgorging and marketing; the houses of grande marque, or brand, often being six or seven years on the yeasts before release.

That means enormous inventories, in millions and millions of bottles, a not inconsiderable cost factor. It also means proper cellarage, the space to keep all those bottles, upside down, on their points, before ultimate disgorging, recorking, and labeling.

GREAT BRITAIN USED to be the number-one export customer (France itself is the greatest customer of Champagne) but that position has been taken over by Belgium, with Italy and the United States now ranking in that order.

The history of wine-making in this northern region traces to Roman days. Vineyards flourished to such an extent in 92 A.D. that the Emperor Domitian ordered the destruction of all the vines in Gaul, and especially Champagne, for fear that the peasants would forget about growing wheat, that his soldiers would drink too much wine and forget about protecting the frontiers of the Empire.

Two centuries later, the Emperor Probus rescinded that edict, and a great splurge of a re-planting ensued; the triumphal arch of the Porte Mars was erected to commemorate the good news.

There are 127,000 acres gross in the appellation of this old province, but not all are of good vineyard possibility. When the Champagne houses attempted to go beyond the borders of the province to bring in grapes to bolster the quantities of their high demand product, the peasant grape-growers staged riots, overturned the arriving wagons of grapes; vineyards, already straw-wrapped against the winter, caught fire, and burned.

Then came 1914 and World War I. The Valley of the Marne, Verdun, Soissons, Chateau Thierry were names that flamed around the world with the German conflict. Trenches were dug through vineyard lands. Fallen soldiers of France, England and the United States were buried here; cemeteries took up hundreds of acres which would never again return to the vine.

ALL OF THIS IS background to the intensive emotional fervor felt by all Champenoise when the name of their province is given to wines not produced within its borders. To the Champenoise, there is no such thing as California Champagne, New York Champagne. No common market country can deal with France with a sparkling wine by that name. The Italian sparklers are called spumante, the German, sekt.

There is good reason for this strong feeling and pride. The soil of Champagne is unique in the world. In prehistoric eras, the whole province was the bed of an immense inland sea, leaving a vast and deep base of chalk. The miles of underground cellars and chalk caverns, excavated by the Romans for building material, make today's ideal storage for aging wines.

The vineyard lands themselves, with chalk outcroppings visible everywhere, would be poor for anything else, soil only inches deep, but ideal for the vines. This imparts to the grapes, and the wines a crisp delicacy and clean taste unmatched in any other vineyards of the worlds.

THERE ARE ONLY A few of the great Champagne houses remaining in private, family ownership, Taittinger, Roederer, Pol Roger, Bollinger, Krug (now shared ownership with Remy Martin). The oldest house, Ruinart Pere et Fils, now belongs to the Moet-Hennessy empire.

Dom Perignon remains a high-demand Champagne, but it is not the one and only great Champagne. Dom Perignon, the Benedictine abbot who developed the methode champenoise still used, was not the only pre-Revolutionary winemaker refining the bottling of sparkling wines in this old province. Dom Thierry Ruinart was a contemporary, as was Frere Jean Oudart, who planted a patchwork of Chardonnay and Pinot Noir vines on the slopes of the village of Pierry, now called "Chateau de la Marquetterie."

When the vine leaves turn their different colors in the autumn, it seems indeed, a marquetary pattern. These are the vines of Taittinger, the Pinot Noir being used for the silky, soft, elegant Taittinger Pink Champagne. Roederer has one, too, and so does Ruinart, seeming to herald an oncoming new importance, in Champagne circles, to Champagne Rose.

Vintage 1979 will be a good year for Champagne. The wine will never be inexpensive, but then, what luxury is?

Friday and Saturday only

'Anything Goes' on stage in Carmel

Cole Porter's Anything Goes, a rollicking musical comedy about the antics of lovesick mobsters and beautiful chorus girls on an ocean cruise, will be staged for two performances only by the Jamesburg Players Friday and Saturday, Nov. 9-10 at the Sunset Center, Carmel.

The Jamesburg Players, a group of Upper Carmel Valley and Jamesburg area residents, will perform each evening at 8 p.m. The production is a repeat of the September show staged at the Hidden Valley Theatre, Carmel Valley to benefit the Jamesburg Elementary School.

Originally a Broadway hit in 1934, written by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse, Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, Anything Goes includes many of Porter's most memorable songs. Now a chorus line of Carmel Valley beauties will perform Porter's ribald and sentimental songs including I Get a Kick Out of You; Anything Goes; Blow, Gabriel, Blow; and You're the Top.

When the show was revived and revamped in 1962 for contemporary New York audiences, additional Porter songs were added, including It's Delovely.

Review critic Mark Rivette said of the first production of Anything Goes: "If you are open for an evening of unrestrained fun, run, do not walk to this musical."

The local production was produced, directed and choreographed by Linda and John Prejean, original members of the White Oaks Theater which is now home of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

Characters and cast members are Linda Prejean as Reno Sweeney, ex-evangelist turned nightclub singer who is accompanied by her bevy of not-so-angelic tap-dancing angels; John Prejean as Moonface Martin, a fugitive who boards the ocean liner and assumes the role of Rev. Dr. Moon; and Mary Silliman as the lovely Hope Harcourt who becomes embroiled in a triangle between her foppish fiance, Sir Evelyn, played by Michael Halton, and Bill Crocker, a "broken down broker" played by John Macy.

Tickets, at $6 general and $5 for children and seniors, are available at the Carmel Valley General Store, Carmel Valley Village; Bartlett Music, Carmel; the Monterey Box office in Sun Stereo, Del Monte Center, Monterey; or at the door on the night of the show.

For futher information, phone 659-4462 or 373-0746, ext. 757.

BROWNIES AND SCOUTS CELEBRATE HALLOWEEN

You spotted snakes with double tongue,
Throny hedgehogs, be not seen;
Newts and blind worms, do not wrong
Come not near our fairy queen.

Betty Haskell was queen for a day and honored figure at a party of the Brownie scouts at the Girl Scouts house. It was the occasion of her eighth birthday.

When Betty Haskell is two years older she will advance into full membership in the Girl Scouts of America. The Brownies are smaller girls, banded in an independent organization for training as future scouts. At the age of 10 they enter the higher group.

Under the guidance of Miss Glenna Peck, Carmel's Brownies are holding their regular meetings, playing their games and awaiting their membership in the Girl Scouts. Their leader is known as the Brown Owl and their assistant leader as the Tawny Owl.

GAS FOR CARMEL MAKING HEADWAY

While natural gas is expected in Monterey and Pacific Grove within five weeks, its delivery in Carmel will not follow until later. Nevertheless, it is believed that construction of a pipe over the hill into Carmel will follow shortly after completion of the Monterey-Grove line.

Pacific Gas and Electric Company submitted an application to construct the gas transmission line to the Railroad Commission of California. The tentative granting of the permit will follow approval of the franchise awarded the company this summer by the City Council of Carmel.

CLAM SUPPLY THREATENED

Should any Carmelite, idly strolling along these classic shores, appropriate in a moment of carelessness an undersized Pismo clam, he may pay $3.57 for his negligence. A visitor from Oakland, foraging about on the beach of Monterey Bay, dug up 70 of these clams recently. Found by a Fish and Game deputy and taken before a Salinas judge, he entered a plea of guilty to possession of undersized clams and paid a fine of $250.

MORE EFFICIENT POST OFFICE PROMISED

Postmaster W.L. Overstreet has announced that the reorganization of the post office is now complete, with the appointment of R.O. Brown as assistant postmaster. There are now six full-time clerks in the office, each assigned to the duties in which he or she is most efficient.

He noted that Carmel's post office is unique. Nearly 3,000 people, including its environs populate Carmel, yet, according to Overstreet, 1,700 families pay rent on individual boxes.

CARMEL IS VERY UNUNIQUE IN ITS ELECTION BEHAVIOR

Carmel's traditional individualism seldom extends to elections and Tuesday's grand national was no exception. Like the rest of California, Carmel turned in a good Republican majority for the state offices, and like the rest of the district and country, Carmel went for Teague in Congress, Pattee for State Assembly, Lawson for Superior Judge.

An astonishing and gratifying four and a half to one vote approved the state retirement plan for city employees.

CHURCH OF THE WAYFARER CELEBRATES 50TH BIRTHDAY

One of Carmel's oldest organizations will celebrate its 50th birthday this week. It is the Church of the Wayfarer, which was established Nov. 4; 1904, after weeks of outdoor services, first at Sixth and Dolores and then in homes and store buildings.

For the observance of the golden anniversary of this occasion, the church will stage a Cavalcade of Fifth Years at Sunset School Auditorium Thursday evening. With drama and music, a cast of more than a hundred will portray the growth of a church in the community.

In honor of the women of the church, the Woman's Auxiliary will have a Heritage Tea on Tuesday at 2 p.m. The program will include a presentation by Mrs. David Nixon, a member since 1922, on the part which women have played.

CULTURAL COMMISSION WRITES JOB DESCRIPTION FOR SUNSET DIRECTOR

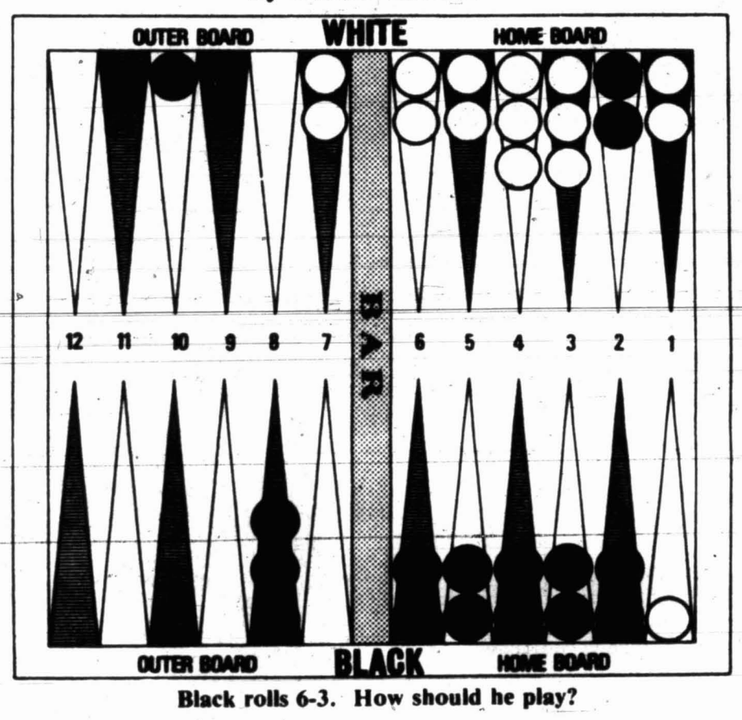

The Carmel Cultural Commission has written a description for the position of Sunset Center director, a job filled previously only by Cole Weston.

Included in the description is the proviso that the director "plan, encourage, organize and supervise" cultural activities for which the city itself would be responsible, including summer activities at the Forest Theater.

City Administrator Hugh Bayless said that eight applications have been received. A decision on who will be Weston's successor will be made by January 1970.

Backgammon

By OMAR SHARIF

Black rolls 6-3. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

If the race were to go to the swiftest, White could chalk up a win in quick time. He is far ahead in the race, and has only one man trapped in the Black home board. On the other hand, Black still has to free two runners trapped deep in White's board.

However, White must roll a 6 quickly, or his home board will disintegrate—you see, backgammon is a blocking game. If White can escape, though, and avoid getting hit on his trip to his home board, winding up the game should be a formality.

Therefore, Black must position himself so as to give him a good chance of hitting the White runner should it escape. That is why I do not like the "obvious" move of running the man all the way from the White 10-point to the Black 6-point.

That leaves two possibilities: playing the 6 from the 8-point to the 2-point and using the 3 to bring the man from the White 10-point to the Black mid-point (12-point); or running a man from the White 2-point to the 11-point.

The first move is reasonably safe (only 6-5 hits), but the drawback is that now, should White escape, Black will have only one man with which to hit. The second choice, while it gives Black a second man to attack the White runner when it escapes, leaves Black vulnerable on the White 2-point.

But is that a fatal weakness? Only 5-1 or 5-2 point on the blot (so does 5-5, but it opens the White 6-point). And even if White does close his board, he will have to roll a 6 at his next turn or be forced to open it again.

Having two men in the White outer board will make Black a favorite to hit White should the runner escape. And hitting the blot should mean the end of the game—White could not accept a double.

I would run to the 11-point every time, playing for money or for my life!

Artist's reception Saturday

E. John Robinson exhibit opens at Zantman Galleries

A one-man show of seascapes by award-winning artist E. John Robinson will open Saturday, Nov. 10 with an artist's reception at Zantman Art Galleries, Mission and Sixth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to meet the artist from 5-8 p.m.

Raised along the Oregon coast where his love for the sea was born, Robinson earned a bachelor's degree in fine arts at the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland before receiving a master's from San Francisco State University.

Though he was an art instructor for many years, the demand for his marine paintings eventually required that he abandon teaching. Instead, he wrote two art books, Marine Painting in Oil and The Seascape Painter's Problem Book. In addition, two oils have been reproduced for the cover of Reader's Digest and a third will be published concurrently with the Zantman exhibit on the November 1979 cover.

William's ocean orchestrations capture many moods of the sea. His painting entitled Private Beach pictures lazy waves lapping the shores of a beach bathed in a sunset; Humbug Mountain projects thundering storm-swept waters near the coast of Northern California.

His works may be viewed through Nov. 23 from 11 a..m. - 5 p.m. daily.

For further information, phone 624-8314.

Multi-media art on view at Carmel Foundation

A one-woman show of multi-media works by Kay Craig, Carmel Foundation Artist of the Month, may be viewed through Nov. 30 at the Carmel Foundation, Lincoln and Eighth, Carmel.

A resident of the Monterey Peninsula since 1946, Mrs. Craig credits the beauty of the area for her desire to paint. She began studies at the Carmel Adult School and continued learning sketching from Nancy Johnson and other local artists. Ten years ago, Mrs. Craig said she tried her hand in watercolor as a means of self-expression and to fulfill a lifelong ambition.

Her works may be viewed from 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Outer space art on view in Carmel

The Outer Space Show, a collection of other-worldly oil renderings of the galaxies by Mark Rickerson, is currently on view at Miner's Gallery Americana, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel.

A unique arrangement of the cosmos and a delicate brush stroke mark Rickerson's work, together with an awe and sensitivity for nature. He produces an array of paintings that communicate the infinite depths of the universe to the viewer.

Born in Michigan, Rickerson now lives on the island of Maui. He has drawn since childhood and completed his formal art education at the University of Colorado.

Rickerson's works may be viewed 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

MIDDLE SCHOOL student Lorelei Kalinowski is either happy or startled. Perhaps she caught a glimpse of herself in the camera lens.

STRANGE BUT FRIENDLY faces give us a bit of Halloween cheer. Attendance was high at Middle School on Halloween. Nobody wnted to miss seeing all the strange costumes, but we wonder after all the evening treats were eaten, how many upset stomachs kept students home from school the next day. Debbie Cormalis (left) and Shelly Stevens stand in front of Steve St. Germaine.

SPORTING THAT long, longer, longest eyelash look that's so much in vogue with cosmetic firms, Joanne Wirtz peers out from those Maybelline eyes.

ANN SACKMAN (left) and Jill Mink are masking their real identities. Supposedly, the students' masks are duplicate images of two of the girls' teachers. We had to withhold the teachers' names to protect the grades of the guilty.

Halloween... a day when strange characters are seen around schools

HALLIE COBANIA (left) and Kathy Hubbard clown around in their Halloween costumes outside Middle School. The fourth leg in the picture does not belong to either of the girls.

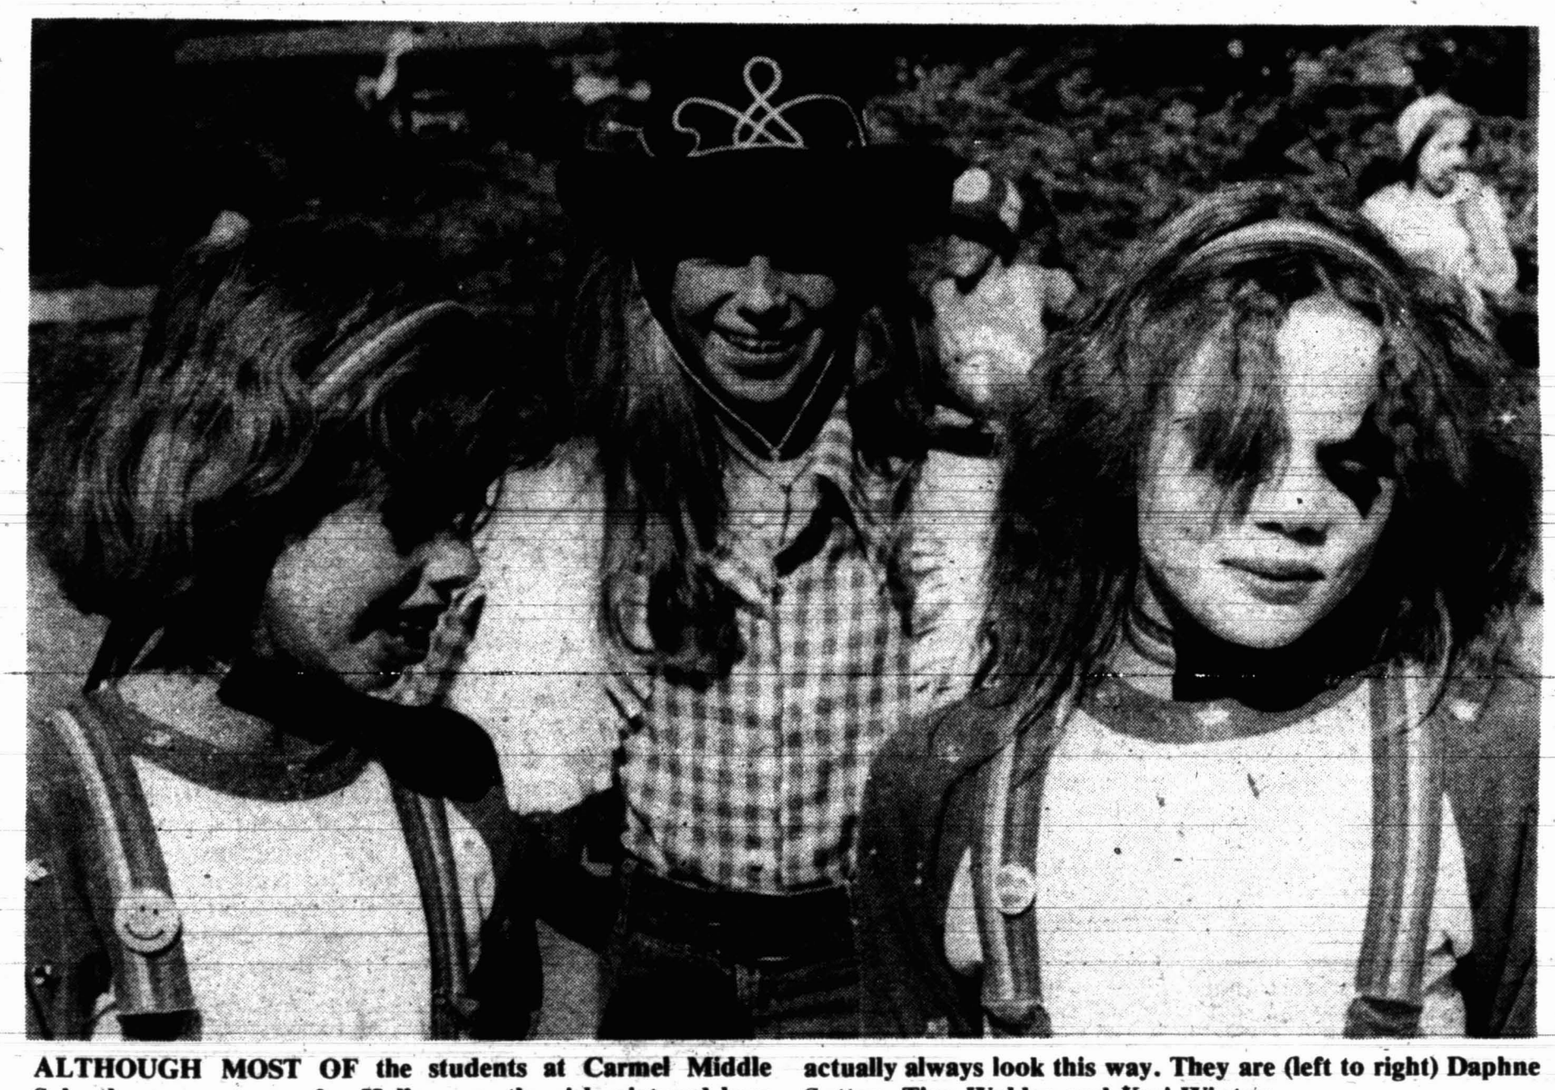

CONTRARY TO WHAT this photograph may suggest, the students at Carmel Middle School are not getting homelier, but they may be getting weirder. When the ghoulish foursome in front convened for a photo, a herd of unnamed boys thought they might like to make the newspaper as well. The girls (in front, left to right) are Daphne Sutton, Tina Waldin, Carrie Winton and Elissia Epel.

GLAMOROUS CHRIS LEE is suffering from Disco Fever, that modern malaise affecting many of the students at Middle School. From the looks of Chris' thermometer the illness might be a long and serious one.

ALL THE STUDENTS seemed to be having the time of their lives while they watched an anonymous Middle School student clock in for Halloween. (Punsters are without pride or self-control.)

NICOLE CERVELLI from Tularcitos School came as a Spanish dancer with spangles on her dress and black evening lace in her hair for her school's Halloween festivities.

WEARING RATHER dour expressions for the Halloween festivities at Middle School, these students seem to be more interested in tricks than treats. They are (left to right) Julie Johnston, Kathy Upham and Payman Vahedifan.

Every room you enter takes full advantage of a view of the pines, as far as you can see. Over 1,800 sq. ft. of contemporary design. One bedroom and bath are quite separate with an outside (as well as inside) entrance. In Carmel Woods, an easy walk to Woods School, yet with a feeling of absolute privacy. $239,500.

2 BRS, 2 BATHS, SOUTH OF OCEAN, $195,000

And an easy walk to town, as well—12th near Lincoln. This is a very well-built home. It has a shake roof, brick and stucco exterior, hardwood floors, birch cabinets, a separate dining room, and a large, protected sunny patio. It is, in fact, an outstanding listing at an unusually (for the neighborhood) low price. Shown by appointment.

LOT, SOUTH OF OCEAN NR. TOWN. $85,000

This is a 40' x 100' lot on Torres between 9th and 10th. It slopes down from the street with sewer connection in the rear. There are several fine oaks and pines. We know of nothing for less south of Ocean, or almost anywhere in Carmel. The owner may also trade up for a Carmel house.

LUXURY CARMEL CONDO, $262,500

This is a large, 2-bedroom, 2-bath unit with a completely separate guest (or in-law) apartment. The home has a dining room, a den, 2 fireplaces, double garage, 3 baths in all, shake roof, wood siding, and the small complex has an extremely nice swimming pool. It is very conveniently located in the High Meadow area and is one of the original 24 units built, subsequently extensively increased in size.

The Old and the New in One Package

Not all street corners are alike. For example, the southeast corner of Camino del Monte and San Marcos is a broad sweeping curve, quite unlike its three square-cut companions. And it's on this curve that this extraordinary house stands.

In the beginning it was a stone house. But to that have been added an entire redwood board-and-batten wing which houses the master suite, a semi-circular veranda around the front, sweeping decks that embrace south and east sides, and a spacious (320 sq. ft.) studio at the rear. All this is to say nothing of the complete remodeling of the entire interior.

There's a consistent color scheme here: white in the walls and soft carpets, red in the redwood ceilings everywhere but the beamed vaults above living room and master bedroom, brown in the ceramic tile floors of halls, kitchen and breakfast room. There are dramatic, modern touches: theatrical spotlights in living room, inset spots in dining room, vanity lamps in both baths, a distant view of a sunny bedroom corner at the end of a long corridor.

The house is neatly arranged in functional spaces. Living and dining rooms toward the front. Kitchen and breakfast solarium toward the rear. This area has a European flavor, with butcher block counters, dark cabinets, tile floors, built-in Caloric range and oven, dishwasher and double sink. Kitchen and bright breakfast room both open to the decks outside. The bedrooms (3) and baths (2) open off an L-shaped corridor on the north side. Louvred doors interrupt this hallway, most opening to closets but one masking a complete laundry room.

The studio is a comfortable distance back of the rear deck. As is, it's an ideal private workroom; with a few simple changes it would make a charming guest house.

The designer has done a superb job of integrating every modern convenience into a house that already possessed a natural aura of tradition. The location is warm, quiet, convenient to downtown Carmel and to Highway 1. Price is $257,500.
